Kidnapers Aided By Violet Sharpe, Woman Charges

Carried Blanket, Witness Swears

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 4.—A story of how an English serving girl from aristocratic Englewood, N. J., supposedly joined a German fur worker from the swarming sidewalks of the Bronx to kidnap the Lindbergh baby was unrolled today.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann's lawyers drew it from witnesses with brief, sharp questions which usually could be answered with a simple "yes" or "no." Then they left it there in the court record to sink into the minds of the jurors, and passed on to other matters.

Tonight a fog of suspicion hangs over the graves of Violet Sharpe and Isador Fisch—one in Brookside Cemetery, Englewood; the other in Germany. Most of the day Edward J. Reilly, chief of the defense staff, worked to make a well-rounded narrative out of his theory that Bruno Richard Hauptmann is sitting here on trial for his life only because he had the misfortune to know Fisch and to go into business with him.

Clings to Story.

At dusk Fisch was the same shadowy person he always has been. The defense had linked him to this crime with the words of only one witness, and that witness faltered every time he was asked to make a clear-cut statement of fact.

Peter H. Sommer, a New York City employe, clung to his tale that Fisch "migh. have been the man" he saw helping Violet Sharpe on a street car in Manhattan about four hours after the Lindbergh child was kidnaped. At any rate he was positive that this woman carried a golden-haired child about 2 years old. That left Fisch in the gray zone of doubt, but the defense then brought to the witness chair a Mrs. Anna Bonesteel who added a sharp, substantial chapter to the story of where Violet Sharpe was on the night of March 1, 1932, and what she was doing.

Knew Violet Sharpe.

So far neither State nor defense has produced a witness in this courtroom to tell why Violet Sharpe raced upstairs in the home of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, grandmother of the Lindbergh baby, and drank poison one night when she was told the State police would be back next day to question her. She had earned a reputation in Mrs. Morrow's service of being a good maid, trustworthy and competent. Her only fault was that she sometimes went to highway roadhouses with men she didn't know any too well.

Her suicide brought suspicion

Carliner Denied Entry on 'Personal Basis,' Says School's President.

Admission to George Washington University has been denied David Carliner, 16, suspended last autumn from McKinley High School for his activities in the District's football episode, which resulted from cancellation of all interhigh school games, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, refused to allow Carliner to enter the freshman class on recommendations made in a letter from Frank C. Daniel, principal of McKinley High School, it was learned.

The National Student League, of which Carliner is a member, attacked the decision in a statement yesterday, but Dr. Marvin asserted last night that Carliner's exclusion had nothing to do with his political activities at McKinley, from which he was expelled and to which he later was reinstated.

"Carliner was refused permission to enroll on a purely personal basis, which was established in Mr. Daniel's letter," Dr. Marvin said.

"We have told Carliner that if he will go to work for a year, and then submit a statement from his employer as to his industry and consistency, his application for admission will be considered on the same basis as others."

Carliner was one of the leaders in the difficulties that arose over cancellation of the football schedule, which followed a near fist fight at the McKinley-Western Tech game. He agitated in behalf of resumption of the game, and distributed pamphlets against the cancellation.

"Dr. Marvin's exclusion of David Carliner is recognized as a reneging of his former liberal stand and as an attempt to prevent further student activity," asserted the statement issued by the Washington branch of the Student League.

"The Student League is instituting a campaign among students and prominent liberals in Washington to send delegations and letters to Dr. Marvin, protesting the demonstration against student leaders."

Hog Price Rise Heartens West

Sharp Upturn Held a Real Indication in Chicago of Better Times.

Chicago, Feb. 4 (Spl.).—Economic skies of the west brightened further today with a decisive upturn in the hog market and steady cattle prices. There has been a definite rise in the cattle market recently and observers have looked upon the gains as a real indication of better times.

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—The hog market, having marked time most of last week, spurted sharply higher today on the hint of continued below normal receipts.

Prices gained 15 to 25 cents above Friday's level, with the top soaring to $8.15, within 5 cents of the highest price since 1931. Weights above 200 pounds sold at $8 to $8.10, while lighter animals sold as low as $7.

The market had 22,000 fresh hogs, including 11,000 direct. This run was around 11,000 below offerings a year ago, however, and only 1,000 holdovers were available. The average price a year ago was $3.90. Outside markets also showed strength, prices rising as much as 20 cents in instances.

Though business was transacted at a slow pace in the cattle trade, steer and yearling prices were fully steady. In fact, with sellers resisting unevenly lower bids, best fed steers, of which few were available, were held above the four-year peak of $13.65. The early top was $13.50. Lower grade cattle, including most she stock, were weak to 25 cents off, however. Recepits were 14,000.

Bids and sales in killing lambs were fully steady with sellers asking higher, holding choice lambs at $9.10 and upward. Sheep were steady, and feeders firm. Receipts totaled 15,000. Below-average run for the date.

Hitler Agrees To Negotiate Security Pact

Informs British Envoy Reich Will Discuss Return to League.

Germany Favors Plans on Planes, Arms as Drawn in London.

Berlin, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Reichsfeuhrer Adolf Hitler today told the British Ambassador, Sir Eric Phipps, that Germany will discuss armaments and her return to Geneva on the basis of the Franco-British proposals legalizing German rearmament.

Sir Eric was understood to have indicated a British delegation headed by Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, or Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, would visit Berlin shortly to inaugurate these conversations designed to bring the Reich back into the European family of nations.

Hitler reportedly indicated to the British ambassador that he was ready to accept, in principal, the proposed aerial defense proposals in which France, Britain, Germany and Belgium would agree to pool their air forces and protect any one of the signatories should she be attacked by any one or more of the others.

Will Seek Clarified Pact.

The general plan of the Franco-British proposals was welcomed in Germany because it embodied recognition of Germany's air fleet.

Hitler probably first will seek clarification of the form the projected Eastern Locarno pact will take. That Germany sign such a treaty is one of the conditions under which France agreed to recognize German rearmament.

Two other questions Hitler is expected to ask before proceeding with negotiations are: Does the Rome pact guaranteeing Austria's independence call for guarantees or merely consultation in the event that independence is threatened.

Demands for Revision Seen.

Hitler is not expected to agree to the Eastern Locarno pact without wide modifications, especially concerning close Franco-Russian cooperation developing in recent months.

He probably would consider joining a consultative nonintervention pact regarding Austria, but may be reluctant if the pact seeks to provide guarantees.

Hitler does not favor perpetuation of the demilitarized Rhineland zones, but if this becomes a vital issue he might concede the point in exchange for absolute parity of man-power with France.

Paris, Feb. 4 (AP).—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin broadcast a radio appeal to Germany tonight, asking the Reich to return to the League of Nations and participate again in the international disarmament conference.

He asserted that the modern menace from the air made "international cooperation essential" and asked that his own people support the Franco-British air defense plan.

However, the vision of British air legions defending France dimmed tonight as French Nationalists asserted they found loopholes in the vast peace plan.

Three of the most important "loopholes" were:

U. S. Diplomat Gets Report.

1. An air defense alliance depends upon Reichsfuehrer Hitler's acceptance.

2. An arms limitation agreement must replace war treaty provisions against German armament, and the world already has vainly debated that subject for four years.

3. Germany and Poland, who have been opposing the Eastern Locarno pact, must change their minds and sign it.

London, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—The United States' immediate interest in the proposed Franco-British agreements centers in the projected annulment of the arms restriction provisions in the Treaty of Versailles.

The annulment of Part V of that pact, ending the World War, was explained today by the foreign office to Ray Atherton, Charge d'Affaires in the American Embassy.

Supreme Court Upholds MacCracken Jail Term; Air Lines Lose Appeal

Court of Claims Must Hear Contract Suit, Appeals Body Holds.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Upholding the right of Congress to punish private citizens for contempt, even though the alleged contempt is completed and irremediable, the United States Supreme Court yesterday ruled that William P. MacCracken, jr., must serve a ten-day jail sentence for permitting the destruction of papers desired by the Senate in its recent air-mail investigation.

Mr. MacCracken, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics and now secretary of the American Bar Association, was adjudged by the Senate in contempt and sentenced to ten days in the District of Columbia Jail a year ago. He immediately started a fight to have the courts set the action aside. This fight was lost yesterday.

The Senate's victory was complete in the Supreme Court decision, to which no dissents were noted. Senate Sergeant at Arms Chesley Jurney will wait the usual 25-day period in which Mr. MacCracken might move for reconsideration and then escort him to the jail, unless he surrenders previously. Mr. MacCracken's plans were indefinite yesterday.

Meanwhile as the high tribunal was affirming the sentencing of Mr. MacCracken, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia handed down a decision upholding the dismissal by a lower court of injunction suits brought by five aviation companies against Postmaster General James A. Farley. The five companies sought to restrain Mr. Farley from cancelling their air-mail contracts.

The appellate court ruled an action in equity could not be brought against the Government, or one of its agents performing his official functions, and that Congress had authorized the aggrieved companies to bring suit in the Court of Claims to determine whether their contracts had been properly or improperly breached. The court in

Chicago's Czar Of Film Union Shot to Death

T. E. Maloy, Waiting Trial on U. S. Tax Charge, Slain by Gunmen.

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Thomas E. Maloy, veteran head of the strife-torn Chicago Motion Picture Operators Union, was killed today by two assassins.

The marksmen maneuvered their car through heavy traffic on the South Shore's outer drive off the site of the World's Fair and poured a hail of shots into the labor czar's limousine.

The slugs from a revolver and a shotgun brought instant death. One well-directed pistol bullet left a gaping wound over the left ear. The dapper Maloy slumped over the wheel of his expensive machine.

Companion Escapes.

Dr. Emmet Quinn, a dentist whose constant companionship had caused him to be dubbed Maloy's bodyguard, escaped the executioners' fire but was cut by a shower of flying glass. The Maloy car skidded to a stop as Quinn grabbed the brakes.

Quinn leaped out in time to see the gunmen speed up the busy boulevard in a small coupe. Quinn gave police a graphic account of the episode that ended Maloy's dictatorship over the turbulent union—a stewardship marked by murder, bombings, strikes and terrorism.

The gunmen cut short efforts by Federal prosecutors to bring Maloy to trial as an income tax dodger. He was indicted by a Federal grand jury on January 25 and last week released on $25,000 bond, pending the fixing of a trial date. He was accused of evading levies against

Move for Curb On Works Bill Gains in Scope

Senate Conferees Agree to Curtail Roosevelt's Spending Power.

By Robert C. Albright.

Further inroads on "carte blanche" powers asked by the President in his $4,880,000,000 bill for works and relief yesterday were planned by Democratic members of the Senate Appropriations Committee, it was authoritatively learned last night.

Although no formal action was taken on pending amendments, it was generally decided to strike out of the bill three lines which would have clinched broad White House discretionary authority conferred in Section 1.

An understanding also has been reached to eliminate power for the President to relieve "economic maladjustments," and to "guarantee" loans to needy individuals, as reported in The Post Sunday morning.

Other Changes Foreseen.

A united Democratic front on other important modifications in the unprecedented bill appeared probable, as another session of the committee majority was called for this morning to pass on specific amendments.

With exhaustion of existing relief funds in sight the last of this week, the committee seriously is considering separating the omnibus measure into two resolutions, the first of which, carrying $580,000,000 for direct relief, would be speeded to passage.

If this course is followed, the Senate will take its own time in deliberating the $4,000,000,000 pro-

Farley Set to Stay as Chairman Of Party for 1936 Campaign

Plan Revealed as Norris Starts Move in Senate to Place Entire Postal System Under Strict Civil Service Control.

(Associated Press.)

Postmaster General Farley, frequently criticized for holding governmental and political jobs simultaneously, proposes to continue, under plans revealed yesterday, as chairman of the Democratic national committee through the 1936 presidential campaign.

This development followed quickly upon the institution of another move in Congress aimed at removing him from one post or the other. Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, a 1932 supporter of President Roosevelt, introduced a bill to place the entire postal system under the strictest of civil service regulations.

It also closed a period of uncertainty as to Farley's plans after many months in which his resignation from the party post had been expected and then postponed. President Roosevelt himself condemned the practice of high party officials also holding offices in the Government.

About a year ago Mr. Roosevelt began an effort to remove from the national committee all members who maintained law offices in Washington and practiced before governmental agencies. There were numerous resignations. Secretary Morgenthau issued orders that any employe of the Treasury who also held a political post must abandon one or the other. Several dropped their political posts.

Farley was represented for weeks as anxious to quit his party office. It was said definitely at the White House in March that Mr. Roosevelt would relieve him as committee chairman as quickly as a successor could be found.

Then came word that Farley would continue for a few months. Later, the understanding was that he would go on until the last party primary had been held in September. It was stretched later to cover the whole campaign of 1934, and now is to include President Roosevelt's campaign for reelection next year.

While speculation was rife as to Farley's and the Administration's

Bill to Restore U. S. Pay Cuts April 1 Is Sent to Roosevelt

Only the President's signature is needed to make the April 1 pay restoration for Government employes a law as the result of acceptance of a conference agreement yesterday by the Senate and the House.

As the House had previously instructed its conferees to concur on the 5 per cent pay cut elimination, approval of the conferees' report was perfunctory.

Sponsors of the pay amendment are confident President Roosevelt will sign the bill as Administration leaders in both Houses voted for the compromise plan after a call at the White House.

Elimination of the last 5 per cent cut of a former 15 per cent reduction will come just two years after the economy legislation was enacted by Congress.

It will cost the Government $22,500,000 to eradicate the pay cut three months earlier than had been planned, but only about $16,000,000 will go to Federal employes. Another $6,000,000 will be paid to pensioners who suffered the same income reductions.

Steps will be taken in both chambers this week to expedite legislation intended to benefit Government employes in other particulars.

Representative Sirovich (Democrat), of New York, plans to call his sub-committee together today to make plans for a hearing on his omnibus bill to bring emergency agency employes into the civil service classified service and otherwise strengthen the civil service system.

Hearings on a similar Senate bill, though not as broad as the Sirovich measure, will begin Thursday before a sub-committee headed by Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, sponsor of the measure.

House Group To Sift NRA Labor Stand

Rep. Connery Calls for Inquiry Monday as Blasts Continue.

Roosevelt Meets With Leaders on Future of Organization.

By Felix Bruner.

While President Roosevelt and New Deal leaders were reaching what was described as "practical agreement" on the future of NRA yesterday, labor's attack on the Recovery Administration continued.

Representative William P. Connery, jr. (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, announced his committee would begin an investigation of labor phases of NRA Monday.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, issued a sizzling statement declaring that Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coordinator, had "systematically scuttled" NRA.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor adopted a resolution approving the Lewis statement and a previous statement by William Green, president of the A. F. of L., also attacking Richberg, and agreed that the two statements represented the sentiments of the entire organization.

Will Reveal "Lost" Report.

Announcement was made at NRA that the report of the research and planning division on labor conditions in the automobile industry would be made public this week. This is the document that was reported lost and later found at the White House last week.

Richberg, members of the NIRB, and other officials connected with administration of the recovery act conferred with the President for nearly two hours, going over in detail proposals for the future of the organization. Following the conference Richberg said "here was "practical general agreement" on recommended legislation." Neither he nor any of the others attending the conference would so much as hint at the nature of the recommendations.

Richberg said, however, that his "best guess" was that the legislation would be sent to Congress this week. This led to the belief that the bill would call for little more than temporary extension of NRA. It is believed that no such speed would be possible if complicated changes were contemplated.

Three Proposals Offered.

Some time ago the NIRB sent to the President three proposals. One was for temporary extension of NRA in its present form. One was for a permanent law limited to hours, wages, fair practices and child labor provisions. The third was for the changed form to be contained in a temporary act.

Richberg characterized as "inaccurate" reports that the functions of NRA would be distributed among various departments. At the same time, transcript of a hearing before the House Appropriations Committee, made public yesterday, revealed that Secretary Roper had told the committee that the Commerce Department might take over some NRA functions.

Asks Equality on Codes.

The labor attack on NRA broke out from a new quarter with Representative Connery's announcement. He said he would call Richberg and Green as the first witnesses and that anyone else who wished might testify.

"I think the hearing will show the necessity for equal representation of labor on code authorities, not only in enforcing codes, but in writing them," Connery said. "Wherever there are five employers on a board there should also be five workers."

Connery indicated that these

Scrip Bonus Plan Presented To President by Democrats

Compromise of the cash bonus issue along new and non-inflationary lines is being promoted in the Senate by a strong group of Democrats, with the knowledge of the President, it was learned last night.

The plan, which is being worked out in detail by Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, with the cooperation of other Senators, will offer a small premium to veterans not cashing their certificates, it was said.

In addition, it would provide for payment of the bonus to those who claim it, in Government script, which would not be negotiable but would be received at face value by the Government in payment of obligations.

Senator Clark discussed the plan briefly with the President yesterday, when he called at the White House in support of a Federal judgeship for George H. Moore, of St. Louis.

Although Senator Clark declined to disclose the President's response, it is known that he will prepare substantiating figures for the information of the White House. Closely collaborating with the Missourian is Senator George (Democrat), Georgia.

It was explained that the premium to be offered to veterans is expected to provide a necessary "incentive" to persuade them not to cash their certificates until the maturity date. The premium would be around 2 or 3 per cent of the value of certificates, it was said.

New Banking Bill Adds Vast Power To Reserve Body

Centralized System Is Seen in Provisions of Measure.

Policy Committee Would Be Set Up

Major Battle Forecast in Congress Over Plan.

(Associated Press.)

A vast increase in the power of the Federal Reserve Board over the Nation's banking structure was asked last night by the Administration in a tentative draft of its new "banking act of 1935."

Trained observers saw in the provisions a move to vest in the governor of the Reserve Board and the board itself many of the powers of a central bank.

The significant measure was handed out quietly on Capitol Hill. Chairman Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, placed the stamp of the Administration on it. Word came from other sources that various Federal financial agencies had a hand in its drafting and that the Treasury had finally shaped and submitted it.

Major Battle Foreseen.

Only a few at the Capitol were informed last night that the measure had been transmitted. Copies were in the hands of the chairmen of the Senate and House Banking Committees. When the measure is started through the legislative machine, however, prospects of a major congressional battle were seen.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, one of the authors of the Federal Reserve act and an opponent of many past efforts to alter its machinery, already has arranged a hearing on the confirmation of Marriner S. Eccles as governor of the board.

The proposed measure, in short, would bestow on the board virtually complete supervision of the credit policies of the Nation.

The old system of having twelve Reserve banks themselves name the open market policy committee, which determines Federal Reserve Bank participation in the Government bond market, would be scrapped.

New Committee.

In its place would be substituted a new committee, consisting of the governor of the board, two board members, and two governors of Reserve banks elected annually by the governors themselves.

Another suggested change would give the board power of approval over the governors of the twelve banks before they can be elected, a power heretofore lacking.

The bill would abolish the position of Federal Reserve agent, maintained by each of the banks, and combine this office with that of governor. These agents are now appointed by the board here, and act as chairmen of the board of the various banks. Appointments would be made annually by the directors.

The revised open market committee would take on the additional duties of making recommendations about discount rate policies. It would eliminate the system's open market policies which would be binding on the Reserve banks.

Under the present system the open market committee, consisting

Liberty League Head Calls Administration Bill Unwise, Unjust.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4 (AP).—Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, assailed the Administration's $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill today as "the most revolutionary, unjustified and unwise attempt at absolute delegation of legislative authority to the executive ever witnessed in this country."

If it passes Congress and goes unchallenged in the courts, he asserted in an address prepared for delivery to the Philadelphia Country League of Women Voters, "it is a certain indication of the disintegration of the form of government under which we have lived and in which we have professed to believe."

"The issue," he added, "is whether democracy shall continue to hold sway in this republic or whether bureaucracy will take its place."

Charges Bill "Railroaded."

Attacking the provision of the bill giving the President wide authority to allot work-relief expenditures as he saw fit, Shouse charged that it was "railroaded" through the House "without adequate hearing by committees, without the opportunity for adequate amendment or revision."

"In less than two days," he continued, "that branch of the Congress which presumably is most responsive to the popular will, was forced to sign on the dotted line a measure which transferred to the executive powers and rights never before surrendered by a legislative body and historically preserved to the Legislature as the direct representatives of the people.

"More and more of recent years the Congress has shown a disposition to abdicate its functions. It has passed on to the executive branch of the Government one power after another which belongs to the legislative branch until it is not surprising that the impression should have gone abroad that the Congress of late has become little more than a rubber stamp to approve executive direction.

The speaker said he did not ques-

Nearly 20,000,000 Jump, State Department Finds.

You can take it from the Census Bureau that, surprisingly, the population of the United States has jumped up nearly 20,000,000 since 1930.

The latest census estimate places the population at 141,574,000, compared with the 1930 census of 122,775,046, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

This was disclosed yesterday when the State Department asked Congress to increase by $1,127 the appropriation for American membership in the Pan-American Union.

Vast Land Area Doomed by U.S. To Withdrawal

(Associated Press.)

The purchase and withdrawal from cultivation of 7,000,000 acres of unprofitable farm land by July 1 yesterday was set as a goal by Administration officials who are attempting to find a place for stranded populations—both rural and urban.

At the same time, Lawrence Westbrook, assistant Federal relief administrator, gave his unqualified indorsement to the proposal by the Commerce Department's business and advisory council for a $2,500,000 revolving fund to aid in the decentralization of industry.

"It fits in with the plans we've made," Westbrook said.

The rural rehabilitation unit, directed by Westbrook, has concerned itself primarily with the problems of the farmers on submarginal lands or with rural groups that are underprivileged.

Purchase Made Quietly.

The subsistence homesteads unit, under Secretary Ickes, has established several projects looking to the relocation of city unemployed having no prospects of immediate jobs.

The relief administration and the AAA have allotments totaling $73,000,000 to purchase submarginal land and they have been quietly purchasing land for some time.

Approximately 45,000 people will be directly affected under the purchase program now under way, according to official estimates. They are being moved to better farming areas if they are willing to attempt a fresh start. Officials said there would be no enforced transfers.

Drought Area Affected.

Some of the areas will be transformed into parks with cabins for summer encampments of underprivileged children. Other sections will be devoted to reforestation.

Much of the land to be purchased is in Middle West drought areas.

Officials said the Federal program would give impetus to similar movements by the States. New York, Pennsylvania and Oklahoma are planning extensive programs of land retirement, they said.

Westbrook indicated that rural rehabilitation and subsistence homesteads projects likely would have a prominent part in the Administration's $4,000,000,000 work program.

Confederate Hero Dies In Atlanta at Age of 104

Until he became ill two weeks ago, Mr. Gentry followed an active daily routine. He took part in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg.

Between You and Me

Gold Ruling and the Time Element; Those Devilish Justices; MacCracken Down.

By Raymond Clapper

THE Supreme Court's gold decision would be easier to take in some quarters if the announcement were made late on a Saturday afternoon.

At that time not only would every market in the world, except the Far East, be closed, but Sunday would intervene, allowing a breathing spell. On any other day, even if the decision were held back until 3 p. m., after market hours, there is the fact that European exchanges would be open the next morning at 4 a. m. (Eastern standard time), thus allowing Americans little time in which to get set.

If there should be any occasion for the Treasury Department to resort to its secret stabilization fund to steady the dollar abroad, the additional time which would be allowed by an over-Sunday pause would be highly advantageous.

In some quarters it is suggested that to close exchanges in this country when the decision comes, would tend to leave them at the mercy of foreign traders whose exchanges would operate on regular schedule. The Supreme Court usually hands down decisions only on Mondays, between noon and 4:30 p. m., but this is a custom which can be broken any time without warning.

Should the decision be announced next Monday it would come on the eve of Lincoln's birthday, a holiday on many exchanges in this country, thus leaving Americans at a disadvantage with foreign exchanges operating full blast.

Lawyers who appear before the Supreme Court regard Justice McReynolds as the most disconcerting. He is apt to break into their carefully spun argument anywhere with a question about some other point in the case. At such times it doesn't do much good for the hapless lawyer to fall back on the usual stall and say, "Your honor, I was coming to that point in a moment." He might just as well stop and answer the question and then go back and collect the broken threads. McReynolds, once a Tennessee lawyer, Attorney General under Wilson, who put him on the court, is an Old Dealer, and is said to grow extremely impatient at times with some of his liberal colleagues on the bench.

Vandevanter, senior in service, is popular among lawyers after bench hours but his sharp questioning during arguments has caused many a knee to quiver.

If members of the Supreme Court bar ever held a popularity contest on the nine robed men, Owen Roberts probably would win. They find him pleasant off the bench and he can tear their arguments to pieces more courteously than any other member.

A lawyer stricken with buck fever usually is handled considerately by the court, but anyone who shows signs of chest inflation is apt to have a pin stuck in him. Even the Supreme Court wants to have a little fun once in a while, and the august justices enjoy hazing a bumptious attorney.

The court shuns overtime work like a Government clerk. When the courtroom clock points to 4:30 p. m. Chief Justice Hughes raps his gavel, though a lawyer may be in the middle of a sentence, and announce a recess. The justices cross the corridor to the robing room and a few minutes later are on their way home. If a justice is in a particular hurry, he may go only as far as the door of the robing room, toss his gown to an attendant, and melt away in the crowd around the corridor.

Members of the Supreme Court appear to be enjoying the spotlight which the gold cases have turned on them. They are beaming and full of whimsy at tea parties. One or two of them have even indulged in a little pleasant gossip. Instead of sternly refusing to read the newspaper speculation, most of them are having daily chuckles reading it. At first reporters hesitated to speculate about the possibilities. The sword of contempt always hangs over an adventurous reporter who writes about any court. But the Supreme Court has been above the arbitrary contempt action in which some lesser judges revel. They can crack down hard enbugh on an attorney who crosses the line.

Once, when a suspected leak occurred, the only such incident in years, the court quietly disposed of the matter by internal investigation. Photographs of the court in session are prohibited, but once an itinerant photographer smuggled a small camera into the room and shot the unwitting justices as they peered over the bench almost directly into the concealed camera eye. Plenty of commotion was raised inside the court precincts, but neither the photographer nor his publication was cited for contempt.

For years justices of the Supreme Court were hesitant about attending Gridiron dinners. Chief Justice Hughes, who had enjoyed many while Secretary of State, broke the inhibition and now various members frequently attend and see themselves satirized. At a recent private dinner in Washington, an entertainer dedelivered a humorous monologue about the court and the New Deal, and one of the most amused guests present was an associate justice.

As Lawyer Frank Hogan will tell you ruefully, the Supreme Court sure did MacCracken down on his client.

A plan may be suggested to Congress from private quarters shortly for a kind of advisory public trusteeship ot help the railroads out of their difficulties. Modelled after the Federal Reserve Board's advisory council, this board would represent various transportation interests, the Government, investors, shippers and competing activities, such as pipelines, trucks and buses. Proponents of the idea suggest that this council would make recommendations to the I. C. C., which would have power to accept or reject them, but in the latter case would be required to make public its reasons. The idea, still in incomplete form, is to devise something midway between the present untenable situation of the railroads and Government ownership.

Knitting Seems To Be Faux Pas In Supreme Court

Knitting may be fashionable in galleries of Congress, but it just isn't done in the Supreme Court, the Associated Press says.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt made her needles click as she observed the opening session of the House recently.

Yesterday a modish matron was busily fashioning white yarn into what promised to be a dress as she listened to the august justices deliver their decisions in Supreme Court.

Up popped an attendant as soon as he noticed her knitting. Whispers—into her ear. Blushes suffused her tanned cheeks.

Three Miss Death In 1,000-Foot Slide

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 4 (AP). Heroic work by rescue parties saved three Portland men today after they had plunged 1,000 feet down an ice chute on Mount Hood.

Bill Blanchard, 24, and Joe Daniels, 26, were badly injured, but physicians said they will recover. Lester Smith, 25, the third member of the party, suffered a sprained ankle.

The three reached the high summit of Mount Hood yesterday and had started down when a small slide struck Blanchard on the head. He pitched forward and slid into Daniels. Then both skidded into the perilous "chute," finally dropping into an ice canyon. Smith was injured attempting to aid the others.

Bullitt, Ill, Unable To See Probers Today

Ill in Philadelphia, Ambassador Bullitt will be unable to appear before the House Foreign Affairs Committee today to discuss conditions in Russia, as scheduled.

Chairman McReynolds yesterday expressed regret over indefinite postponement of the executive hearing, but assured committee members the diplomat would fill the engagement before returning abroad.

600 Troops Guard Alleged Murderer As Trial Is Begun

Cleveland, Miss., Feb. 4 (AP).—Protected by the greatest array of military force ever assembled for a Mississippi murder case, James H. Coyner, colored, alleged slayer of Mr. and Mrs. Aurelius B. Turner, went on trial for his life late today in Bolivar County Circuit Court.

Selection of a jury required only 30 minutes and taking of testimony was begun immediately.

Earlier, while 600 National Guardsmen patrolled the courthouse and commanded every approach, the man was indicted for murder. He pleaded "not guilty." The grand jury returned separate indictments and Coyner was called to trial first for the killing of Mrs. Turner. The couple was slain and the bodies mutilated in the Turner home December 8.

Coyner once served a term in the Indiana Penitentiary for grave robbing. His arrival in Cleveland early this morning from Jackson was marked by extraordinary precautions. Some threats of mob violence had been heard here.

Manacled, he was brought here in what National Guard officers described as a "lynch proof" baggage car attached to a special train. Two hundred steel-helmeted soldiers accompanied the train.

Historic Bugle Sounds Taps for Gen. Metcalf

Lawrence, Kans., Feb. 4 (AP).—Taps were blown at the funeral of Brig. Gen. Wilder S. Metcalf today on the battered bugle used in Metcalf's Mexican border campaigns.

Capt. Faustino Domingo, of Topeka, for many years chief trumpeter of the First Kansas Infantry, which Metcalf commanded, sounded the call. The bugle will be presented to the State Historical Society.

Gen. Metcalf died Friday night at the age of 79.

labor representatives should be in addition to any consumer representatives. Connery said he planned to oppose the tendency of minimum wages under codes to become maximum wages and that he believed wage rates should be graded according to work performed.

Connery said that NRA had equalized hours to some extent, had done away with "yellow dog" contracts and child labor, but that there had been "no compliance." He said hundreds of letters of complaint about code violations had resulted in no NRA action.

"Labor has lost all confidence in code authorities," he said.

Lewis Assails Richberg.

In his statement attacking Richberg, Lewis declared that Richberg "secretly conspired with the leaders of the automobile industry to deceive the President and bludgeon labor."

"In tearing the mask of hypocrisy from Richberg, labor is not attacking the President," Lewis continued. "It is merely revealing to the President the unworthy liaison of a trusted servant.

"Mr. Richberg can not adopt the role of a martyr by saying that he is condemned for being loyal to the President and supporting the Government. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson handed Mr. Richberg the NRA as a functioning institution with a record of accomplishment. Mr. Richberg has systematically scuttled it with his constant attacks of Section 7(a) and his personal entente cordiale with the leaders of the steel industry and other powerful interests.

Refuses to Enter "Debate."

"His latest act in the automobile industry represents his crowning achievement in the interests of those before whom he fawns. He has destroyed the confidence of the workers in the NRA because his self-seeking personality seems to dominate it."

Richberg said he intended to make no reply to the attack.

"I am not going to enter into any general debate," he said.

Besides approving the Lewis and Green statements, the A. F. of L. council discussed plans for forming automobile workers into an industrial union. One answer to A. F. of L. protests against the automobile code has been that the Federation membership among motor workers is very small."

Francis Dillon, federation organizer for automobile workers, will attend a union rally at the General Motors plant in Atlanta tonight. From there he will go to St. Louis, Kansas City and Milwaukee. Green plans to speak to automobile workers at Cleveland February 17.

While reports of a possible strike in the motor industry continued, observers felt the A. F. of L. would not risk a strike until more workers are organized.

2-Capital Firms Agree To Abide by Auto Code

Two Washington automobile firms, the General Finance Co. and the Superior Motor Car Co., Inc., yesterday consented to the filing of a suit permanently enjoining them from violating the Code of Fair Competition for the Motor Vehicle Retailing Trade.

Acting on their consent, J. Ninian Beall, of the code authority, took before Justice Jesse C. Adkins in the District Supreme Court a prepared order enjoining the firms from their alleged abuse of the code and Justice Adkins signed it.

The complaint was that the two firms, portrayed as "unenfranchised dealers," sold two new sedans of a popular make, in a territory already enfranchised for that make of car.

Their attorneys, Leo Schlosberg and Arthur G. Frode, said the violations were unintentional and would not be repeated.

Militia to Combat Kentucky Vice Ring

State Inquiry Into Corbin Police Force Possible.

Corbin, Ky., Feb. 4 (AP).—Indications that the State's inquiry into an alleged automobile theft ring would be extended to include robbery of clothing stores and vice conditions in Corbin were given by Brig. Gen. Ellerbe W. Carter upon arrival here today. An investigation of the Corbin Police Department also was being considered.

After having rounded up 29 allegedly stolen automobiles in the foothills of Clay County in a four-day drive by members of the National Guard and State police, Gen. Carter brought a company of National Guardsmen and a detail of State police here today.

Squads were sent out at once to search the narrow valleys in Knox, Laurel and Whitley counties for stolen cars and Gen. Carter held a conference with Mayor S. B. Marcum and Commonwealth Attorney Henry M. Cline. Both officials promised full cooperation.

Widow Questioned In Society Murder

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Authorities resumed their questioning of Louis K. Straub's comely widow and launched an intensive search for the death weapon today as they sought to solve the baffling Saddle and Cycle Club murder mystery.

Mrs. Helen Straub, 34-year-old former night club entertainer, protested her love for her slain husband and disclaimed any knowledge of why an assassin shot him down in one of society's favorite play spots.

Officials ascertained Straub carried insurance policies that would pay $20,000 in double indemnity for a violent death.

tion the need of direct Federal appropriation for relief.

"But the general character of the work and the important questions of policy involved should be directed by the Congress in the proper discharge of its duties," he said.

"The amount of money contemplated is greater than the total annual cost of the Government in any year from 1922 to 1931, inclusive," Shouse said. "The policies involved would ordinarily engage the attention of at least a half-dozen standing committees in each branch of the National Legislature. But no legislative guidance is even attempted.

"The authority conferred upon the Executive gives him the opportunity to reorganize the governmental machinery should he see fit; to create a vast new bureaucracy not answerable to the Congress, free from civil service restrictions and, therefore, open to political spoilsmen, and to make rules and regulations within his own discretion, without let or restraint, for the violation of which fines may be imposed upon any citizen."

Lauds President's Industry.

"May I say," he declared at another point, "that I have not the slightest disposition to criticize the motives of the President of the United States. On the contrary, I pay tribute to him for the courage, the industry and the persistence with which he has attacked the many and varied problems confronting his Administration. But with all due regard for his excellent intent, with full appreciation of his high motive, one may disagree deeply with some of the methods which he advocates or employs."

The speaker also flung a criticism at President Roosevelt's social security program. He commended the objectives sought, but questioned the wisdom of combining legislation for unemployment insurance, old-age pension, child aid and public health activities in a single omnibus bill.

In Washington last night, the league issued a statement proposing that the legislation be considered on the basis of eight principles which included separation of the subjects into independent measures and the observance of "sound fiscal policies."

Girl Kidnaped, Hunt Launched For Ex-Convict

Federal Agents Join in Wide Search After St. Paul Crime.

St. Paul, Feb. 4 (AP).—Four law enforcement agencies launched an intensive hunt tonight for June Haas, 9-year-old girl who was abducted by a man and woman as she walked to school.

They also exerted every effort to locate the child's former-convict father, Charles Peter Whitson, on learning he had threatened to take her from Mrs. Mary Haas, foster mother, who has had custody of the child for the last six years.

Miss Bertha Wendling, an aunt, reported June had been under guard for some time because of Whitson's threats.

St. Paul police, Department of Justice agents, deputy sheriffs and representatives of the county attorney's office were handicapped in their initial steps because the father's whereabouts have been unknown for a considerable period.

June had lunched today with Mary Anne Mixer, with whom she was on her way to school when a small sedan drew up beside them. Inside, witnesses said, were a big man and a woman. They snatched the Haas girl and sped northward. The Mixer girl, who is about the same age as June, said later she thought the man in the car fitted a description of June's father.

A warning was broadcast to all towns on main highways to be on the lookout for the car.

Hiccoughs Leaving Girl.

Elmhurst, Ill., Feb. 4 (AP).—The 21-day attack of hiccoughing which threatened the life of 19-year-old Elizabeth Warner, coed in Wheaton College, seemed today to be passing. Dr. A. L. Mathis said sleep had abated the malady and pronounced the girl improved.

Working Fund Of RFC in 1935 Put at Billion

Jones Predicts Increase in Loans to Industry From New Laws.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, yesterday estimated at $1,000,000,000 the total funds his agency will have at its disposal this year for general purposes, including new loans to industry, advances to railroads and participation in mortgage loan companies.

He said the RFC will begin with about $400,000,000, receive $400,000,000 more in repayment of loans, and may or may not raise an additional $200,000,000 through the sale of railroad or other securities.

The RFC actually has resources of about $900,000,000, the chairman said, but the pending $4,880,000,000 works bill provides for taking up to $500,000,000 from this amount and giving it to the Federal Relief Administration, leaving $400,000,000.

Mr. Jones predicted some increase in loans to industry as the result of liberalizing amendments approved by Congress, but he pointed out that that body still demands they be "secured." The RFC has $300,000,000 available for loans of this character, but only $40,000,000 has been authorized and only $9,000,000 disbursed.

Members of Congress "keep fussing about our loans," the RFC chairman said, "and yet they keep putting security into the law."

He added that he saw little, if any, difference in meaning between the old requirement for "adequate security" and the new clause requiring security that would "reasonably assure" repayment.

The desire of Congress, he held, is clear; that is, Congress wants loans made on as liberal a margin as possible. He declined to estimate what effect this and other changes will have, but did give the opinion that removing the present $500,000 limit on individual loans will materially boost loan applications.

Texas House Balks At Alfalfa Bill as 'Prof.'

Austin, Tex., Feb. 4 (AP).—The Texas House of Representatives declined today to request the University of Texas regents to make former Gov. W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray of Oklahoma a professor in the school's department of government.

Representative Clarence E. Farmer, of Fort Worth, author of the resolution, said a recent talk by Murray before the House showed him to be a deep student of government and "a man who would grace the faculty."

Pension Plan Compromise, Aim in House

But Roosevelt Is Expected to Insist on Present Measure.

A movement to seek a compromise between the Administration and Townsend old-age pension advocates was initiated yesterday by Representative Joseph P. Monaghan (Democrat), Montana.

While the Westerner declined to discuss his proposal with reporters, he was known to have approached most of the outstanding proponents of Dr. F. E. Townsend's scheme for $200-a-month gratuities. He suggested selection of a committee to call on President Roosevelt and offer to withdraw opposition to the Wagner-Lewis bill if the White House would approve Federal pensions of $60 a month for the aged.

There was said to be considerable support for such a compromise among the corporal's guard of out-and-out Townsend bill advocates in the House. Monaghan, however, has not yet asked an appointment with Mr. Roosevelt.

Observers believed the President would not accept any proposal which would involve an increase in the contemplated Federal gratuities of $15 a month to match similar donations by the States to all over 65. Instead, he probably will direct his leaders to push the Wagner-Lewis bill through Congress under rules banning or discouraging amendments.

One of the chief arguments of the compromise sponsors was that some States could not afford to pay even $15 a month to the needy aged and should not be asked to do so by the Federal Government.

Meanwhile, the most outspoken champions of the Townsend plan showed signs of losing the confidence they displayed a month ago. They made no secret of their belief that the Californian's plan will be rejected, though until a few days ago they made sweeping claims. Now they are so sure of defeat they are speaking in terms of next session.

Dr. Townsend, in his second appearance before the House Ways and Means Committee, heatedly refused to yield under cross-examination. He denied his scheme was financially unsound or that it would lead to wholesale inflation.

Some of the most pointed questions were hurled by Chairman Doughton, who assailed Townsend's testimony as "fallacious" and founded on a "specious basis." Townsend conceded it would be difficult to estimate how much money could be raised by a general 2 per cent sales tax, but insisted such a levy would be sufficient to finance his program.

Questioned by Doughton, Townsend twitted:

"I'm not interested in the least in the cost of the plan."

"I'm sure of that," scowled the chairman. "I just wanted to get an admission of that kind in the record."

It was Doughton who brought out that seven agents of Townsend were paid $50 a week and expenses. Townsend added his organization accepted contributions of from 1 cent up.

Asked by Representative Hill (Democrat), Washington, whether there would be any limitation on how the $200 a month could be spent, the witness responded:

"Let him kill himself off. Let him spend it on anything he wants—whisky or anything else. That's immaterial. It's business and commerce we are interested in. We aren't concerned with morals."

The Californian contended distribution of $200 a month to 8,000,000 aged would definitely end the depression. He said unless his plan is approved "this will be the last Congress to uphold the old economic system."

Dr. Edwin E. Witte, executive director of the President's committee on economic security, told the House committee the Townsend proposal was impossible.

"The inflation and duplication taxation involved in the plan," he observed, "will cause prices to soar and soon, even with $200 per month, the pensioners will not be better off than they were before, while those below 60 will be immeasurably worse off. The Townsend plan is one which arouses great hopes, but actually will give the old people little or nothing."

Farley Is Planning To Keep Party Post

intentions, Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference in August that he emphatically opposed political activity by Government workers or politics playing a part in their selection.

The introduction of Norris' bill was received without surprise, and also without comment by party leaders. Norris' attitude was made clear some time ago when he expressly urged that legislation be enacted forbidding members of the committee from holding Cabinet posts.

His bill goes far beyond the situation of Farley, however. It would create a 10-year term for the Postmaster General. Instead of being chosen largely on a basis of political recommendations, postmasters would be appointed for "merit and efficiency" only, with promotion on the same basis.

Congressmen ought to be tickled to death to be rid of the job," Norris said.

Legalization of liquor brought $1,369,596 into the District coffers during the calendar year ended January 31, which marked the first year of legal liquor return here, the Liquor Control Board announced yesterday.

Of this sum, $799,969 were in taxes, $561,777 in license fees, and $7,860 in fines for violations of the liquor law. During the year there were 125 citations for violations of regulations and 21 licenses were revoked; 12 were suspended; 49 fines were imposed in police court; 13 received warnings and 30 cases were dismissed.

Perjury Charge In Arms Inquiry Is Threatened

(Associated Press.)

With a new Supreme Court decision bolstering the investigating power of the Senate in one quarter, the Munitions Committee of that body sent a warning out along another line yesterday—a perjury prosecution hint.

Senator Vendenberg, member of the committee now investigating cruiser bid collusion charges, after listening to conflicting testimony, told the hearing there was sufficient evidence to warrant a perjury inquiry by the United States district attorney's office.

The high court upheld the right of the Senate to punish for contempt a witness before its ocean and air mail committee.

The Munitions Committee, during the day, also refused the request of Clinton L. Bardo, former president of the New York Shipbuilding Co., for permission to toss some verbal answers back at the "dead cats" he said were thrown at him during last week's session of the committee.

Barred From Record.

Senator Vendenberg responded immediately that the shipbuilder could reply, but after an hour's deliberation he told newsmen Bardo would be permitted to submit a statement to the committee but it would not be included in the record.

Vandenberg's statement that "there is before us sufficient evidence justifying certifying the record to the United States district attorney to learn whether perjury is involved," came after he had read a letter from Charles H. Hyde, New York attorney. Hyde contradicted an assertion by Axel B. Gravem, Washington attorney, who denied he had offered the services of a "fixer" for $250,000 in securing shipbuilding contracts from the 1933 program. Hyde wrote the committee that:

"He (Gravem) was very bold in his assertion that a man he represented was so influential that he took part in framing specifications and conditions for warship contracts."

Woman Testifies.

Quickly a woman witness, Miss Judy Kitchen, was called to the stand to go into testimony of another witness, Thomas M. Cornbrooks, an official of the Gulf Industries, of Pensacola. Cornbrooks, testifying last week, declared he knew nothing of the activities of Ernest I. Cornbrooks, his brother, in connection with a shipbuilders' meeting in Washington in July of 1933.

Miss Kitchen, secretary to Laurence R. Wilder, chairman of the board of Gulf Industries, declared Thomas Cornbrooks had discussed with her employer various phases of the meeting and his brother's connection with it.

Vandenberg said after the hearing:

"We will take up this matter as soon as a full committee is present. Two diametrically opposite stories have been told under oath. They can't both be right. We are not attempting to point out which is wrong."

Jail Sentence of MacCracken By Senate Upheld by Justices

effect suggested that the companies bring suit in the Court of Claims for damages.

The Supreme Court's decision in the MacCracken case was one of 13 written opinions handed down by that tribunal, in addition to a number of orders, in a two-hour session. In conformity with the announcement Saturday, the court made no reference to the gold clause cases pending before it.

Decision on Gold.

Decisions in the gold-clause cases may come at any time, but it was generally believed there would be no ruling before next Monday. The fact that Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes did not prepare any of the opinions yesterday led some observers to conclude the court had reached a decision in the gold-clause cases and that he was writing the opinion. But this was the merest speculation.

Mr. MacCracken was attorney for several aviation companies, including Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., when the Senate's special air-mail investigating committee served a subpena on him on January 31, last year, directing him to deliver to the committee all books and papers in his possession relating to air-mail and ocean-mail contracts.

Report to Senate.

After a series of rapid events, it developed that while the committee was deliberating the question of whether letters between Mr. MacCracken and his clients were privileged communications, the attorney had permitted representatives of aviation companies to remove part of their correspondence from his office. In one case the letters removed were subsequently torn into pieces and thrown into a waste-basket.

The committee reported MacCracken's actions to the Senate, which ordered that he be arrested and brought before its bar to show cause why he should not be declared in contempt. The former Government official immediately employed Frank J. Hogan, the celebrated attorney, who challenged the right of the Senate to punish his client.

Mr. Hogan raised several points which the Supreme Court settled yesterday. One was that Congress had surrendered its power to punish private citizens for contempt when it passed a statute making contempt a misdemeanor and authorizing the Ditsrict Attorney to prosecute such offenses. His second point was that the Senate lacked the right to punish for a contempt completed and irremediable.

Opinion of Court.

The Senate rejected Mr. Hogan's contentions, found his client guilty of contempt by a vote of 64 to 20 and sentenced him to jail for 10 days by a vote of 56 to 26. Mr. Hogan petitioned the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia for a writ of habeas corpus, which subsequently was dismissed. His client, after signing a pledge to serve the jail sentence if the higher courts ruled against him, was freed on $5,000 bail. Meanwhile the District of Columbia Court of Appeals ruled in favor of Mr. MacCracken and against the lower court.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis, speaking for the Supreme Court, held the contention that the power to punish for contempt "may never be exerted, in the case of private citizens, solely for punishment" rested on "a misconception of the limitations upon the power of the Houses of Congress to punish for contempt."

He said there may be lack of power to punish because the alleged contempt did not interfere with the legislative function of Congress, "but where the offending act was of a nature to obstruct the legislative process, the fact that the obstruction has since been removed, or that its removal has become impossible is without legal significance."

He pointed out that "the power to punish a private citizen for a past and complete act was exerted by Congress as early as 1795 and since then it has been exercised on several occasions."

Denies Right Impaired.

Justice Brandeis likewise rejected the contention that Congress had impaired its right to punish for contempt by passage of the statute. He said the purpose of the statute was to provide additional punishment.

He held that MacCracken's plea that he had done all in his power to remove whatever obstruction he had caused to the legislative process and was ready to give additional testimony was "a question of guilt" and not of jurisdiction. Whether he purged himself of his contempt was a matter to be considered by the Senate and not by the courts, the ruling held.

L. H. Britten, vice president of the Northwest Airways, Inc., who destroyed some of the papers taken from MacCracken's files, also was adjudged in contempt of the Senate and served ten days in jail, declining to appeal to the higher courts. The Senate refused to find Gilbert Givven and Harris M. Hanshue, two other aviation officials involved in the matter, guilty of contempt.

Air Lines' Suits.

The suits before the appellate court were brought by Boeing Air Transport, National Air Transport, Pacific Air Transport, Varney Air Line and Pennsylvania Air Line companies. They asked the courts to restrain Mr. Farley from enforcing his order cancelling their air-mail contracts.

The court reiterated the ancient rule that "the sovereign can not be subjected to suit, either at law or in equity, without its consent, expressly given" and added that "the rule that the United States may not be sued without its consent is all embracing."

The aggrieved aviation companies, the court held, had been given the privilege to sue in the Court of Claims by Congress last June and should exercise that privilege, adding that "what has occurred in these cases amounts to a breach of the contracts by the Postmaster General—whether properly or improperly breached, can not be determined in this action but remains to be established in the appropriate action at law."

Associate Justice Hitz, concurring in the decree affirming the lower court's decision, noted a dissent from the opinion.

Hitler Agrees To Negotiate Security Pact

Tells British Envoy Reich Will Discuss Return to the League.

The section, covering disarming Germany, also is embodied in a separate peace treaty between the Reich and the United States, which may be affected.

Atherton conferred with Assistant Undersecretary Orme Sargent in the foreign office. Sargent gave him the British official description of the Franco-British conversations and proposals for an understanding legalizing Germany's rearmament if the Reich agrees to return to the League of Nations and the world arms conference at Geneva.

The Franco-British move generally was hailed by the press and public as a step in the right direction toward assuring peace in Europe.

Simon Assailed in Commons.

However, a scene was created in the House of Commons by George Lansbury, labor leader, who accused Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, of using "Hitleresque and Mussoliniesque" tactics in making public the Anglo-French accords as an accomplished fact instead of first presenting them to Parliament for consideration.

The French delegation meanwhile, headed by Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval, departed for Paris. Laval on the train expressed satisfaction with the accords, adding: "Our declaration is a new attempt at the organization of peace. It will be well received by all peoples; and we hope it will meet the same favor of all governments.

"I hope Germany agrees to join with us in consolidating the peace."

Flandin Hails Progress.

Flandin and his wife flew back to Paris. Interviewed on the airliner, the premier said: "The next meeting will occur in Paris, when the British ministers come to liquidate various outstanding questions.

"We can only rejoice that this voyage to London has enabled us to bring a new guarantee of security to France."

Laval was understood to have instructed the French embassy in Moscow and their legation in Prague, Czechoslovakia, to assure these governments the Franco-British agreements left unimpaired France's promises for the early conclusion of an Eastern Locarno treaty of mutual assistance in time of war.

Rome Cites Objections.

Rome, Feb. 4 (AP).—Government spokesmen admitted tonight there were several "geographical" reasons which might cause Italy to decline joining the Anglo-French proposed air alliance, but said there were no political objections.

It was declared that nevertheless Italy considers results reached at London even better than she had hoped for.

The spokesman said it was doubtful whether Germany will return to Geneva, however, according to the Italian belief.

Reserve Board Power Boosted In Banking Bill

ably, could unload the system's holdings of $2,430,000,000 of Government securities on the market today and the Reserve Board would be powerless to stop such action.

As a means of preventing injurious credit expansion or contraction, the board would be given power to change reserve requirements as to districts, or cities, and as to time or demand deposits.

As an inducement to get new members, the proposed measure would waive present capital requirements for admission of any insured nonmember institution, provided all regular requirements were met. This permission, however, would expire on July 1, 1937, when all insured banks must become reserve members or lose their insurance.

The bill also would amend the Federal Reserve act to permit member bank loans for a 20-year period on real estate, if made on an amortization basis. The permission would extend up to 75 per cent of the value of the property.

The bill also would seek to elevate the efficiency of the board by demanding higher qualifications, but would increase the salaries of future members by $3,000 to $15,000, with compulsory retirement at the age of 70 on $12,000 pension.

Other Provisions.

In return, it would be required that the board members be "well qualified by education and experience to participate in the formulation of national economic and monetary policies."

The governor's membership on the board would expire when he is no longer designated as governor by the President.

Collateral requirements of member banks for rediscount would be broadened to take in any sound asset, subject to regulations of the Reserve Board, and the board also would have authority to prescribe limitations on maturity of advances to member banks. Obligations wholly guaranteed by the Government would be eligible for purchases by the banks without regard to maturity.

The omnibus measure also fixed a definite liability for members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation by setting a maximum limit of assessment at one-twelfth of 1 per cent of total deposits to replace the present 1 per cent obligatory stock subscription of total deposits, with liability for repeated assessments thereafter. A lower rate may be fixed for mutual savings banks.

The temporary insurable maximum of $5,000 would be continued in the new bill, and banks, not members of the Federal Reserve System would be permitted to withdraw from insurance after notice to their depositors and to the insurance corporation.

Bruno's Defender Revealed as Witness in Hall-Mills Case

Sommer Avows He Isn't Paid For Testimony

Princeton Student Tells of Seeing Car With Ladder Near Flier's Home.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 4 (AP).—Peter H. Sommer, New York City municipal employe and defense surprise witness whose testimony made an "I-wouldn't-say-yes-and-I-wouldn't-say-no" refrain before the week-end court adjournment, returned to the witness chair today as Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial opened its sixth week.

Sommer faced a drumfire of questions as Attorney General David T. Wilentz resumed his cross-examination in an effort to discredit the witness' story.

It was Sommer who brought back into the case the names of Violet Sharpe, the Morrow maid who committed suicide during the Lindbergh investigation, and Isador Fisch, Hauptmann's dead business partner, and the prisoner's alibi for the possession of the $15,000 ransom money.

Sommer related that he saw a woman resembling Miss Sharpe and a man resembling Fisch with a golden-haired 2-year-old baby in a one-piece sleeping suit in New York near the Weehawken ferryhouse on March 1, 1932, the night of the kidnaping.

Q. Now, Mr. Sommer, as I understand it, you saw a small man and a tall man help a woman with a baby on a trolley car in New York? A. Yes.

"Trying to Explain."

Prior to that, Sommer said, he saw the small man on the ferry boat on which he came over from Weehawken, but hastened to explain the small man was not the same small man he saw on a trolley on the Jersey side.

Once as the witness faltered over the first small man and the second small man Wilentz shot at him:

"Don't evade the questions."

"I'm trying to explain."

Q. You've had all week-end to think about your testimony, haven't you?—A. I didn't think about it.

Wilentz showed Sommer the photograph of Isador Fisch again and the witness reiterated that it "resembled" the "small man" he had seen.

The witness looked at another defense photograph which he said also resembled the man.

Q. You wouldn't swear, though, that these are the photographs of the man you saw?—A. I wouldn't swear positively.

Sommer admitted that he "made a mistake" Friday when he testified the man on the Weehawken trolley was the same he saw later on the ferry boat.

Q. You are a professional witness, aren't you?—A. I don't qualify as a professional witness. I only came here to tell of the incidents I saw that night.

Q. I thought you came here in the interests of justice?—A. I'd say I did.

Q. Do you not testify in court for a price?—A. I haven't spoken about a price.

Q. Do you not testify for a fee, a price, a reward?—A. No sir, I do not.

Hall-Mills Witness.

Q. Haven't you on occasion testified and when the money was unpaid, you stated the testimony you gave in court was incorrect and improper?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many cases have you testified in?—A. Two, I think.

The witness told his questioner of cases in which he testified, including the Hall-Mills murder case.

Wilentz brought out that the man was an investigator of an agency employed by the defense in the Hall-Mills case, but eventually appeared as a State witness.

Wilentz inquired about Sommer's testimony in an accident case in 1930.

Q. Didn't you testify falsely in that case?—A. I did not.

Q. You testified in that case that you were at a stand near the scene of the accident?—A. If it was recorded that way, I didn't testify to it.

Q. You knew nothing about that case, about the accident?—A. Not about the accident.

Q. No, and you testified about the circumstances and condition prior to the accident?—A. No, if that is in there (the record) it's wrong. I had a row with the lawyer when I came into court.

Q. Didn't you testify falsely? A. I did not.

Q. You testified about things you didn't know?—A. No. I testified I saw certain bottles explode.

Q. But you made a mistake on the date. It was after the accident that you saw the bottles explode.—A. That's right.

Q. But you testified they exploded at the time?—A. Yes, I was mistaken.

$15 Was Expenses.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you only had your testimony corrected after the attorney failed to pay you?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you threaten to go to the district attorney if he didn't pay you $15?—A. No. That was my expenses.

Wilentz brought from Sommer that he was employed in the supplies division of the New York City administration and then ended his questions.

Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, asked questions on Sommer's testimony on the exploding bottles.

Q. There is not any doubt you were on the ferry boat?—A. No.

Q. There isn't any doubt you saw what you told us about?—A. No.

Q. And you reported it to the police the next day?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you alone?—A. No. I had two young men with me.

Q. And when you notified police you never expected you would testify in this case, did you?—A. No.

Reilly then turned over the witness to the State for redirect.

Spends 33d Birthday in Courtroom

Forgetting any celebration of his thirty-third birthday to appear at the Hauptmann trial, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is shown entering the courthouse yesterday.

court of the woman carrying the baby (allegedly Violet Sharpe). Sommer said he might have seen it in the newspapers, but couldn't remember when.

He added that he thought he had seen the picture of the man (allegedly Isador Fisch) about a year and a half after the kidnaping.

"Don't you know," Wilentz shouted, "that that picture never appeared in the newspapers until September, 1934, after Hauptmann's arrest?"

"I don't know about that," Sommer replied.

Fails to Identify Picture.

Sommer wasn't able to identify a picture of a woman presented by Wilentz as that of the woman he allegedly saw with a baby on the trolley the night of the crime.

"You wouldn't say 'yes' and you wouldn't say 'no,'" Wilentz said tauntingly.

Ben Lupica, the young Princeton student who saw an auto with a ladder near the Lindbergh estate at dusk the kidnap day, was then sworn. He gave his full name as Sebastian Benjamin Lupica.

C. Lloyd Fisher, of the defense, took the witness for direct examination.

Q. Where did you live on March 1, 1932?—A. With my parents in Hopewell, N. J., about a mile north of the Lindbergh estate.

Q. Did you go past the Lendbergh estate to get to your home?—A. Yes, I was commuting to Princeton Preparatory School in my car.

Q. Are you here under a State subpena and did you testify before the grand jury.—A. Yes.

Lupica told of encountering a man in a car with a ladder in it near the Lindbergh estate.

Q. As you started up the road what happened?—A. I noticed a car coming around the bend. It pulled across to the wrong side of the road near a cornfield.

Saw Ladder in Car.

Q. What happened then?—A. He stayed there, and I started to go on up the road, and I passed him on the right side.

Q. Did you see anything in the car?—A. I saw two sections of a ladder in the car. It was resting on the tops of the front and back seats.

Q. Will you describe to me the man you saw in the car?—A. He had a dark coat. He was about 40 years old and appeared thin.

Q. Was he of foreign nationality? A. No; he did not seem to be.

Lupica told of seeing two sections of the ladder later in possession of the police.

The witness told of meeting a resident of the area, Nelson Wyckoff, to whom he recounted the incident of seeing the ladder. At the time, he said, he did not know the kidnaping had occurred.

The boy said he went on to school and was summoned to the Lindbergh estate late the afternoon of March 2, 1932.

The police, even then, he went on, prompted by Fisher's questions, did not show him the ladder.

Fisher asked that the kidnap ladder be brought into court.

Q. Did you observe the make of the car you saw?—A. Yes, a 1929 Dodge.

Q. What was the color of the car you saw?—A. Black or dark blue.

Q. It was green by any chance? A. No, black or dark blue.

The student testified that the car carried Mercer County, New Jersey, license plates.

Such a statement, he added, was made to the police at the time.

Q. It was not a new York license?—A. No.

Lupica testified he made a statement that the car was black or dark blue, a 1929 Dodge sedan. The police, he said, had him pick out a car of similar make.

Q. Have you at any time told anyone that you recognized Bruno Richard Hauptmann as the man you saw in that car?—A. No.

Q. Can you identify Bruno Richard Hauptmann as the man you saw in that car?—A. I can not.

Fisher's last question brought out that the driver did not resemble Hauptmann and the kidnap ladder was like the one Lupica had seen. Lupica was released for cross-examination.

Wilentz, with detailed questions, elicited from the witness that he only caught a "fleeting" glance of the ladder.

Shown an article in a New York tabloid newspaper bearing his name, Lupica testified he had been paid for that and another but he did not write them. He asserted they erroneously stated he had identified Hauptmann as the car driver and he had complained to the city editor.

The attorney general then asked the witness if he had not called him to his office after the newspaper article and chided him for allowing the story to appear.

Wilentz had the student state that he was told the prosecution would permit him to say no more than what he previously told police—the man in the car resembled Hauptmann.

Q. And you said then before the attorney general, Prosecutor Hauck and a half-dozen others that the man you saw resembled Hauptmann?—A. Mr. Hauptmann has a resemblance to the man.

Q. You've always said so?—A. Yes.

Q. And you so testify today.

The witness nodded.

Fisher arose and shouted his question:

"You said you got a fleeting glance at the driver like the witness Hockmuth (old man who told a similar story).

"We can argue that in summation," Wilentz interjected, objecting to the question.

Q. Can you identify this man (indicating Hauptmann) as the man you saw?

Wilentz objected, but Justice Trenchard allowed an answer.

A. No I can't.

Lupica was excused.

Hans Kloppenburg, Hauptmann's close personal friend, was the next defense witness. Reilly took him for the direct examination.

Q. Do you recall being at the Hauptmann home the night of April 2, 1932?—A. Yes.

Q. What day of the week was it? —A. It was Saturday night.

Q. Do you play a musical instrument?—A. Yes, mandolin and guitar.

Q. What instrument did Mr. Hauptmann play?—A. Mandolin.

Q. Now what was your custom about these musical evenings?—A. The first Saturday of each month, we would play music at Mr. Hauptmann's home.

Describes Party.

Q. Tell the jury about the night of April 2, 1932?—A. I got to Mr. Hauptmann's home about 7 o'clock, or a quarter of 7. We played some music and cards. Then we had coffee and cake, and between 11 and 12 o'clock he drove me in his car to the White Plains subway station.

Q. He was in the house the entire evening up to the time he drove you to the subway station?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else was there?—A. No one except Mrs. Hauptmann.

Q. How many times did you see Fisch at Hauptmann's home?—A. I don't know. Twenty times. I first met him in July or August, 1932.

Shown photographs, he identified Fisch and Henry Uhlig, a friend and associated in business in the Bronx with the little furrier.

Q. Now on the evening of this party for Fisch, what date was it? A. It was on Saturday before he sailed.

Kloppenburg listed the people present at the Fisch farewell party. Reilly assisted him with some last names with which he was not familiar.

Q. Did you see Isador Fisch come in?—A. Yes, I saw him at the door at the top of the stairs.

Q. Did he carry anything with him?—A. Yes. He carried a package about 5 to 6 inches high, 7 to 8 inches wide and about 14 inches long.

Q. When was the last time you saw Fisch with that package in the Hauptmann house?—A. They went through the hall to the kitchen.

Reilly was seeking to impress the jury the package Fisch had when he talked to Hauptmann was the shoebox filled with ransom money.

Q. You saw Hauptmann and Fisch go to some other part of the house? A. Yes.

Q. When they came back did Fisch have the package with him? A. No.

Didn't Remain Overnight.

The witness said Fisch did not remain overnight with the Hauptmanns the night of the party, but left about 1 a. m. Kloppenburg could not recollect whether he saw Fisch depart.

Q. You don't know whether that package—whether Fisch took that package away with him?—A. I am sure he didn't. He left it in the kitchen.

Q. But you did not see him go home?—A. No.

Q. Then you don't know what he took with him, when he left the party?—A. No.

Mrs. Anna Bonesteel, of Yonkers, was called by Reilly as the first witness of the afternoon session. She told of operating a restaurant.

Q. Where do you live?—A. 71 Alexander street, Yonkers, N. Y.

Q. You operate a restaurant?—A. Yes, in Yonkers.

Q. Is that restaurant somewhere near the dock?—A. Yes, near the Yonkers ferry.

Q. Where does that ferry run to in New Jersey?—A. To Alpine, N. J.

Q. You are there all day long?—A. Until 1 a. m. if the customers are there.

"Violet Sharpe," said Mrs. Bonesteel.

Says Maid Came to Cafe.

She said that Miss Sharpe came to her restaurant the night of the kidnaping and waited there for about an hour.

Q. Did you ever see her again?—A. Yes; after I saw her picture in the paper.

Q. When did you learn of the Lindbergh kidnaping?—A. The next day. Everybody was talking about it. The newspapers and the radio.

Q. When did you ever tell anybody about Violet Sharpe being at your restaurant that night?—A. I told several persons, but they said, "Don't pay any attention to her."

She said Violet Sharpe came to her restaurant once before March 1, 1932, and sat across a table from her.

Q. Did she come there the night of the kidnaping?—A. Yes; she came in about 7:30 and stayed until about 8:30 or 9.

Miss Sharpe, the witness said, was in a highly nervous state and "shook like a hen on a griddle."

The girl, Mrs. Bonesteel said, explained she was waiting for someone.

"Someone drove up in a car," the woman recounted. "Miss Sharpe waved her hand and went out."

Attorney General Wilentz began cross-examination, showing her a photograph.

Q. Is that the lady who came the first night?—A. That's not the girl.

Q. Is it Violet Sharpe?—A. I think that is Violet Sharpe.

Q. How old was the other lady? A. About 25 or 28.

Q. Have you seen her since? A. Not since that night.

Violet Sharpe was carrying a gray, heavy blanket the kidnap night on her arm, the witness testified.

She left with a group of men in the car.

"I could not be sure there was another girl in the car," Mrs. Bonesteel said.

Q. You saw no child in the car? A. I saw no child in the car.

Reilly called Joseph B. Dutt, a friend of Peter H. Sommer.

Dutt said he was with Sommer and another man the night Sommer told of seeing two men and a woman with a baby on a trolley.

Dutt, who described himself as a radio mechanic who was not working steadily at the time of the kidnaping, said Sommer had raised him since he was 6 years old.

He recalled that he had attended a dance "with a pal of mine" on the kidnap night and heard of the crime over the radio.

The following day, he said, he accompanied Sommer to the police station, where Sommer reported how he had seen a man resembling Isador Fisch and a woman resembling Violet Sharpe with a 2-year-old, golden-haired baby in a one-piece sleeping suit near the New York-Weehawken ferry on the kidnap night.

A red-haired police officer appeared before the witness at Wilentz's request. Dutt could not say definitely that he was present at the police station where Sommer told his story.

Carl Jugg, Brooklyn electrician, followed Dutt to the stand. He told of being with Sommer and Dutt when the police report was made.

Q. Do you know the last witness? —A. Yes, since 1928-1929.

Q. Do you recall where you were the night of the kidnaping?—A. Yes, at the Roseland ballroom, on Broadway.

Went to Sommer's Home.

Q. What time did you learn of the kidnaping?—A. By means of the radio early in the morning.

Q. What time did you return to your Brooklyn home?—A. About 3 a. m.

The witness then stated he went to Sommer's home the following day and accompanied Dutt and Sommer to a police station, where Sommer allegedly reported what he had seen the kidnap night near the ferry house.

Wilentz asked the witness to identify the police officer, but he could not.

Paul Vetterle, of Brooklyn, was the next witness, telling of attending Hauptmann's birthday party in November, 1933.

Q. When you arrived was Hauptmann there?—A. No.

Q. He came in later dressed in a sweater. He remained the entire evening?

Vetterle described the evening of talk about Germany and listening to the radio.

Fisch, he said, arrived at 7 p. m. and he and the others remained until 10 o'clock. They all went to the subway station to go home.

Wilentz took the witness for cross examination.

Q. You didn't know anything about Hauptmann in Germany, his record, his life?—A. No.

The attorney general asked him briefly if he was sure he had not left the Hauptmann house early that birthday night of November 26, 1933, when Hauptmann allegedly passed a ransom bill at a Greenwich Village theater miles away.

The witness said he left the Hauptmann birthday party about 10 o'clock. Wilentz pressed whether it might not have been about 6 or 7 o'clock that evening, but the witness said 9:45 or 10 was nearer correct.

Q. Are you sure Fisch was there? —A. Oh, yes. Fisch was there.

Testifies About Footprint.

Thomas E. Sisk, Federal investigator, who told of making a report on a cast of footprints in St. Raymond's Cemetery, was called by Reilly.

Dr. John F. Condon, ransom intermediary, Sisk testified, told him of discovering the print a day or two after the payment, April 2, 1932.

The investigator could not identify the police officer, Dr. Condon said accompanied him when the find was made. He explained he talked to the intermediary "approximately a year and a half later."

Capt. Russell A. Snook, supervisor of identifications of New Jersey State Police, was called as the next defense witness.

Snook was asked to outline the duties of Corp. F. A. Kelly, the identification expert of the State police, who examined the nursery and the ladder for fingerprints. Snook replied that he was a fingerprint operator who worked out of the Morristown barracks.

Capt. Snook explained Kelly was assigned to make fingerprint impressions but made no subsequent study. The report in the search for prints at the Lindbergh nursery, Snook said, was turned over by Kelly for filing in the identification division.

The police official testified he did not know of any detailed pictures being made, "inch by inch" of the kidnap ladder.

Snook was unfamiliar, he said, with the examination made by a New York criminologist, Dr. E. M. Hudson. Dr. Hudson asserted he found more than 500 prints on the ladder.

Q. Do you know how many times the ladder was taken apart for the identification purposes?—A. No; I do not.

Q. Was it ever taken apart in your presence?—A. It was not.

Q. Didn't Kelly report there were no readable prints on the ladder?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't Dr. Hudson find some that were readable?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't Kelly report, after Dr. Hudson's examination, that there were some?—A. Kelly said there were several worthless smudges.

Schwarzkopf Called.

Col. Morgan Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, was called.

Q. Was there a duplicate made of the ladder?—A. Yes; three sections. It is at the Wilburtha Station (Trenton).

Q. What was it built for?—A. Experimentation in the case.

Q. Was it ever submitted to the Jersey City Police as the original ladder?—A. No.

Q. Was it ever so submitted to the Department of Justice as the original ladder?—A. No.

Q. Was it built as far as possible of the same material and dimensions as the original ladder?—A. As far as possible, yes.

Q. Why was an experiment made with a section of the kidnap ladder when your theory was that two were used?—A. We tried every possibility.

Q. You found the ladder reached above the window ledge with three sections in use?—A. Yes; the shutter swung against it.

Asked if there was any mud on the rungs of the ladder when it was found, the witness said as he recalled there was but he did not recall which rungs, or whether it was on all rungs.

Q. Now, colonel, isn't it a fact, that when you first put the kidnap ladder together you had difficulty in determining which section went with which?—A. When we put it together it was obvious where each section fitted.

Q. Now, colonel, was such an experiment as this made that various of your men were sent up and down the ladder?—A. Yes.

Q. What was the purpose of that experiment?—A. To ascertain what weight it would carry.

Duplicate Ladder Broke.

Q. And at what weight did the duplicate ladder break?—A. At approximately 180 pounds.

Q. Do you know how much the Lindbergh baby weighed?—A. About 30 pounds.

Q. How much did you determine was the weight that broke the ladder?—A. 180 pounds. We determined that the ladder would break with a weight of 180 pounds or more.

Q. Where did the duplicate ladder break?—A. At the same point the original ladder broke.

Q. At the dowel pin?—A. Yes.

Q. Was any such similar piece of wood as the dowel pin found on the Lindbergh property?—A. I am not sure.

Q. Didn't you find a dowel stick 3 feet long of the exact size and shape of those in the kidnap ladder in the corner of Col. Lindbergh's library?—A. I don't recall that.

Schwarzkopf said he was unable to express an opinion whether the maker of the ladder used his left hand.

Q. It was not a particularly well-made ladder?—A. No. It was not like a standard ladder.

Q. Colonel, was not a single fingerprint found in the nursery?—A. As a matter of fact, when none was found, I ordered a second investigation. There were smudges found.

Tells of Bulletins.

Q. Were there any fingerprints of Bruno Richard Hauptmann found on that ladder?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. How many bulletins were issued to the press?—A. There were three or four a day during the early weeks of the investigation.

Q. Did you say in one of them that Harry Fleischer had something to do with the crime?—A. No. We investigated every lead, however.

Q. Did you say in one of them that the suicide of Violet Sharpe solved the crime?—A. I'm quite sure I didn't.

Q. On March 2, 1932, what kind of a car were you looking for?—A. A Dodge sedan.

Q. What color?—A. There were several colors reported, including green and blue.

Schwarzkopf told of discovering a car of the type sought concealed under hay on a farm near the estate. The car was later found to have been stolen and the thief traced.

Another car also was found abandoned in Brooklyn. No fingerprints were taken from it, he said.

Wilentz took Schwarzkopf for cross-examination.

Q. Every clew you found, every lead you got, you traced down to the very best of your ability?—A. We did.

Q. And every one was eliminated after investigation until the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann?—A. Yes.

Q. And every known criminal was checked and investigated as far as possible until eliminated?—A. Yes.

Q. Of course, there was no criminal record in this country on file for Bruno Richard Hauptmann?—A. No.

Court Adjourns.

Q. Did you find any other Dodge car, than that in Hauptmann's garage, where you found $14,000 of Lindbergh ransom money?—A. No, sir.

Q. What did the weight consist of when you tested the ladder for breakage?—A. Just a man weighing 180 pounds.

Q. Where did the duplicate ladder break under that weight, the same place as the kidnap ladder?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other man who was arrested, who owned a Dodge, who had $14,600 of ransom money hidden in his garage, and who had Dr. Condon's address and telephone number written on a closet panel in his home?—A. No, sir.

Q. Nobody else but Hauptmann? A. No, sir, no one else.

Q. During all the years of the investigation did the experts identify the handwriting of the ransom notes as any other man but Hauptmann? A. No, sir.

Schwarzkopf was excused and court adjourned at 4:03 p. m.

Borrowing Power Boosted 9 Billion

President Roosevelt yesterday signed legislation which raises the Treasury's borrowing power by $9,000,000,000 and authorizes the issuance of "baby bonds."

The bonds will be sold in denominations as low as $25, representing a post-war innovation of the Treasury. Under present plans they will go on the market March 1, and Mr. Roosevelt will buy the first one.

Purchasers of the bonds, which will be sold principally at postoffices, will get only a receipt—the bonds remaining in the Treasury. They will be sold on a discount basis, the terms of which have not been announced.

The bill signed by the President amends the second liberty loan act by increasing to $25,000,000,000 the amount of long-term bonds that may be outstanding at any time. Since the Treasury already had authority to issue about $2,500,000,000 in additional bonds, this increases borrowing capacity to approximately $11,500,000,000.

Senator Assails Court Decision On Mayflower

Ruling Premature, Ignored Findings of Probe, Reynolds Asserts.

The District Supreme Court was criticized by implication yesterday for deciding the Mayflower Hotel financing case before the Senate District Committee had concluded its inquiry into the case, as hearings were resumed before a sub-committee headed by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina.

After hearing several witnesses and discussing probable legislation based on its findings, the sub-committee decided to meet again this morning to hear Paul Lesh, counsel for the majority bondholders' committee.

Senator Reynolds, in a formal statement on the court's action in turning over the property to the first mortgage owners, said as the hearing opened:

"The disposition of the hotel has been pending before the Supreme Court of the District. The judge was furnished with a copy of our findings. So far as we can ascertain he himself made no investigation into the facts. The findings of the committee are entitled, under a decision of the Supreme Court, to great respect.

Says King Talked to Judge.

"The matter was still pending in court when the present session of Congress convened. Senator King communicated with the judge before whom the case was pending, and he tells me he secured a promise that the matter should be held until this investigation was completed. However, a week ago he passed certain orders, more or less final."

Senator Reynolds then explained that he proposed to introduce a bill to amend the national bankruptcy act "so that it will be impossible for a court to give effect or treat as valid any deposit agreement secured by brokers who have sold securities to an amount greatly beyond the value of the property as is the case here."

The sub-committee then discussed two specific proposals for amending the bankruptcy act.

Would Bar Brokers.

The first of these would bar from organizing bondholders' protection committees any broker or dealer in stocks who had aided in the selling of bonds above the proper value of property which served as the security.

The second proposal was that any house issuing bonds be required to make public to interested parties lists of bond and stock holders.

Forest Harness, special assistant to the Attorney General, who testified before the sub-committee, approved the first proposal when questioned by Senator Reynolds, but warned that the second might jeopardize the rights of legitimate stock brokers.

Earlier Harness recounted his investigations into the financial transactions of the American Bond & Mortgage Co. and Halsey Stuart & Co., which were active in the handling of Mayflower Hotel securities.

Joseph Law, counsel for a minority group of first mortgage holders, also reviewed past financing operations in connection with the Mayflower.

Woman Again Accuses Violet Sharpe

down on her head, and today the defense began to capitalize it.

Mrs. Bonesteel runs a restaurant up by the Yonkers ferry. She is a bulky woman whose voice carried from the witness chair to the last reaches of the courtroom. As soon as she was sworn in, Reilly went straight to the point.

"How long had you known Violet Sharpe before the Lindbergh kidnaping?"

"About two months."

"How long was Violet Sharpe in your restaurant the first time you saw her?"

"Half an hour."

"Did you talk to her?"

"Yes."

'Did you see her again on March 1, 1932?"

Yes."

"Where?"

"She came into my restaurant that night about 7:30 o'clock with another girl, whose name I can't remember. Violet Sharpe was very nervous and said she was waiting for someone. She had a blanket with her. When she left I said 'She's as nervous as a hen on a hot griddle.'"

"When she left, what did she do?"

"She held up her hand and a car stopped about 200 yards from the restaurant. She got in and drove away."

Called Gang Rendezvous.

The contention of the defense is that this restaurant was the rendezvous of the gang that slipped across the Hudson River later that night and kidnaped the Lindbergh baby. Mrs. Bonesteel said there were five men in the automobile that picked up Violet Sharpe, but that she could not recognize any of them.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz had a photograph ready to hand to Mrs. Bonesteel as soon as she was turned over to him for cross-examination.

"Who is this lady?" he asked, thrusting the picture at the witness. "Is it Violet Sharpe?"

"No, that is not Violet Sharpe."

"Don't you know that this was the last picture taken of Violet Sharpe?"

"No, I don't know that," Mrs. Bonesteel said sharply, grabbing the picture and looking hard at it.

She decided to reverse her testimony.

"Yes, that is Violet Sharpe," the witness said.

"Oh, you recognize it now?"

"Yes, I took a better look."

Mrs. Bonesteel was excused from the witness chair and the defense had rounded out its version of the events that led up to the kidnaping of the baby.

Defense Contention.

This is the way the defense reconstructs the crime:

Violet Sharpe did the "inside" work on the kidnaping. She was the one who knew that the night of March 1, 1932, would be a good time to do the kidnaping. She was the one who told Isador Fisch's gang when to strike.

The five men met Violet Sharpe at Yonkers and drove down the Hudson River highway. Earlier in the day two members of the gang had taken a ladder across the Hudson into New Jersey in preparation for the kidnaping that night. They were the men that Lou Harding, a laborer and former convict, swore he saw near Hopewell—the men with a ladder in their car who stopped and asked him the way to the Lindbergh estate.

Plans were all set, then. It was dusk on the afternoon of March 1. Ben Lupica came down the Hopewell road on his way home from Princeton Preparatory School. He took his mail out of a box where the main highway intersects Lindbergh lane. He was reading a letter when up came a dark blue sedan with a ladder lying across the seats. But Lupica saw only one man, he swore today—"a man in a dark coat, dark hat and with thin features." No words were passed between them, he said.

"Can you say," shouted Lloyd Fisher, of defense counsel, "that this man was not Hauptmann?"

"It was not Hauptmann," Lupica replied.

Wilentz began cross-examination.

"Will you swear that this man you saw was not Hauptmann?"

"No, I won't. He resembled Hauptmann somewhat."

"Didn't you get paid for writing two articles for a New York newspaper, saying that the man you saw was Hauptmann?"

"Yes, but I had the editor correct them later."

Subpenaed by State.

Lupica was in a peculiar position. He was in court under a subpena issued by the State, but Wilentz did not call him as a witness. Instead, he came to the witness chair, under a prosecution subpena, to testify for the defense.

His story seemed to contradict itself, and also to snap the smooth narrative that the defense was building. Harding saw two men in the car, Lupica only one. So Lupica left the stand without adding any clarity to the case either for or against Hauptmann.

To go on with the defense's story:

Sometime between dusk and 9 o'clock that night a ladder was laid against the wall of the Lindbergh home. The baby was stolen. A car whizzed out of the muddy lanes of Sourland Mountain and headed for New York. Let Peter Sommer, who was in Farview, N. J., giving a fingerprint lesson that night, take up the tale.

He boarded the Weehauken ferry at midnight to return to his home in New York. The boat chugged across the Hudson and Sommer got off. Then, he said, he saw two men—a tall one and a short one—helping a woman on a street car. The woman, Sommer swore, resembled Violet Sharpe.

"Gave Money to Bruno."

One of the men was Fisch. The woman carried the baby, the street car clanged away and Peter Sommer went home.

That's all there was to it, the defense contends, except that Fisch was the man who collected the ransom from Jafsie in the cemetery that night. And when he realized that he was on the edge of death he wanted to die in Germany and took a shoebox full of ransom money up to his old friend Bruno Richard Hauptmann and said: "Keep this for me."

Hauptmann has told that story himself in court at least three times. Today Hans Kloppenburg came to the witness chair and threw the weight of his testimony to the aid of the prisoner.

Kloppenburg and Hauptmann have been friends for years. They nodded and smiled at one another today as Kloppenburg strode across the front of the courtroom to take the oath. The tall, clean-cut German made a good witness. He wasn't any bootlegger or speakeasy proprietor or former convict; he was a hard-working German cabinet maker who never knew his friend "Richard" had a criminal record in Germany until after Hauptmann was arrested and charged with the Lindbergh crime.

"Did you attend a party at Hauptmann's home for Isador Fisch just before he sailed for Germany?" asked Reilly.

"I did."

"When was that?"

"In December, 1933."

"Tell us about it."

"Mrs. Hauptmann and Hauptmann were there. There was also Mrs. Mueller, a young German couple from Elizabeth, a Mr. Schissler and another young woman. I got there between 6 and 7 o'clock."

"Fisch Brought Package."

"Did you see Fisch come in?"

"Yes, from the stairs."

Returns to Stand as Defense Witness

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Friend 'Watched' Fisch Give Bruno Ransom, He Testifies.

"Did you see him in conversation with Hauptmann?"

"Yes, he talked to him right away."

"Did he have a package under his arm?"

"Yes, it was about 5 inches high, 6 inches wide and 14 inches long."

"Where did Fisch and Hauptmann go?"

"Into the kitchen."

"When Fisch came back and joined the group, did he have the package with him?"

"No."

On cross-examination Wilentz drew from Kloppenburg the admission that he had not seen Fisch leave the party that night and that he might have taken the shoe box full of ransom money away with him.

Supplies Another Alibi.

Kloppenburg then supplied Hauptmann with another alibi.

Kloppenburg said he remembered the night of April 2, 1932, very well. He was sure Hauptmann could not have been out in St. Raymond's Cemetery collecting $50,000 ransom from Jafsie that night because he and "Richard" were playing and singing at the Hauptmann home. They met every Saturday, the witness said. He played the guitar and Hauptmann played the mandolin. Coffee and cakes were served that night, Kloppenburg said.

Wilentz got up to try to break down that alibi.

"Isn't it a fact," he asked "that Hauptmann had you to his house early in the evening of April 2 so he could have an alibi to prove he didn't collect the ransom money later?"

Kloppenburg laughed. Defense counsel, also laughing, got up to object to the question and was sustained by the court. The State never did shake Kloppenburg's story. It did, however, get in some deadly thrusts against Peter Sommer and his story of the midnight ferry boat ride.

"Did you testify in the Hall-Mills case?" asked Wilentz.

"Yes," Sommer replied.

"Did you testify as a fingerprint expert?"

"No, as an operator for a detective agency."

"And it's true, isn't it, that you worked as a detective for the defense and then turned around and testified for the State?"

"That's right."

"Well, I don't know . . ."

"You got $15 for testifying in a case in New York, didn't you?"

"I did—but it was expense money."

The last witness of the day was Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State Police. He told of building a ladder that was a duplicate of the one used in the kidnaping. It broke, he said, at the exact place where the other ladder broke on the night of the kidnaping.

The crash came when a man weighing 180 pounds went down the ladder, Schwarzkopf said. It was brought out that the Lindbergh baby weighed about 30 pounds at the time of its death. Hauptmann weighs between 150 and 160.

If today's speed is maintained, the defense may rest its case late Wednesday or early Thursday.

Shanty Section Here Deplored By First Lady

Concern Is Voiced After Inspection of Alley Dwellings.

Washington's alley clearance and housing problem is complicated by the growth of a semirural development, half in the District and over the line, past Benning road in Maryland, Mrs. Roosevelt has decided after her inspection trip through alley dwellings and the new homes of those who have left the alleys, she said at her press conference yesterday.

This rural development, commonly known as "Marshall Heights," is composed of sheds, mostly built by the tenants themselves, she pointed out. She asserted unsatisfactory sanitary provisions exist, and all the water has to be carried. The First Lady praised the efforts of relief workers who are trying to move the alley dwellers and obtain proper living quarters for them at the same time.

Will Attend Meeting.

Mrs. Roosevelt will leave Friday to attend the community meeting on unemployment at the Town Hall in Hyde Park.

She explained yesterday that due to the closing of many important estates in the neighborhood and the proximinity of a not-very-successful farming district, the problem of unemployment has increased in the township.

Factory Adds Forge.

The furniture factory at Hyde Park, in which Mrs. Roosevelt is interested, is adding a small forge, where objects like pewter ware and andirons and other metal work may be fashioned, she announced.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she has not given up hope for the ultimate adherence of the United States to the World Court.

She has worked for a long while for what have been known as "lost causes," asserted the First Lady. In the long run they nearly always have won, she said.

3 Say Realtors Broke Promise Made in Sales

Hammerman Brothers Go On Trial for Fraud in Federal Court.

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—Three witnesses who said they bought real estate from corporations operated by Samuel L. Hammerman, of Baltimore, and his brother, Herman, testified today that promised improvements to properties were not made. The Hammermans went on trial in Federal court on charges of using the mails to defraud in real estate operations carried on in 28 subdivisions in eight States.

The witnesses were Mrs. Margaret Wilder, whose property was located near Baltimore; Mrs. Bird Edmunds, with property at Beltsville Heights, near Washington, and Mrs. Serena Spada, who had bought real estate at Library Heights, near Pittsburgh.

In an opening statement, Walter L. Barlow, special prosecutor, charged the defendants had persuaded many persons to buy lots from their concerns by promising developments that were never made.

Robert R. Carman, defense counsel, in reply said every effort had been made to satisfy the 13,332 persons who bought lots in the various subdivisions. In cross-examination, Carman produced letters which Mrs. Edmunds and Mrs. Spada admitted signing to the effect that they were satisfied with their property.

The witnesses said, however, they signed the letters without paying much attention to them merely to close their business with the real estate corporations selling the land.

The trial of the cases is expected to last at least through the week.

Divorcees Banned By Border Guard, Inquiry Reveals

The House Appropriations Committee learned yesterday the United States had an immigration inspector on the Mexican border whose guide for the admission of foreigners was not the immigration laws, but the Ten Commandments.

Daniel W. MacCormack, commissioner of immigration and naturalization, reported the inspector as saying he would debar a divorced person from entry. It was pointed out such action would not be in accordance with the law.

"That don't make no difference. I go by the Ten Commandments," the inspector replied. MacCormack added his department was putting "an end to such conditions."

Many Injured As French Riot In Provinces

Clubs With Razor Blades Used Against Guards in Strike Clash.

Paris, Feb. 4 (AP).—Clubs studded with razor blades were wielded in a sharp clash between police and steel strikers in northern France today, and mounting civil tension in the provinces and in arts greeted the return from London of Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

The problem of keeping rival political groups from flying at each other's throats on the streets here Wednesday, the anniversary of the bloody riots of February 6, faced the premier and his government.

Flandin was hardly off the train before receiving a delegation from the Associations of Victims of February 6, and heard their terms for compliance with his ban on demonstrations Wednesday.

Guards Injured in Clash.

Dispatches from Valenciennes and Lille told of serious steel strike clashes at Trith-St.-Leger, Louvroil and Sous-le-Bois.

Two French guards were seriously wounded and 20 strikers were injured in a battle on the streets of Trith, where barricades were erected and angered strikers swung clubs to which razor blades had been fastened, and hurled paving stones in a losing fight.

Strike Against Pay Cut.

The steel strike was in protest against a 10 per cent pay cut. The strikers smashed doors and windows in the homes of several workers who refused to strike.

The strikers at Louvroil were charged by a contingent of mounted guards and a short, sharp fight ensued in which eight of the strikers were injured.

One hundred and fifty strikers at Sous-le-Bois fought with other mounted guards. Two of them were seriously wounded.

Many in West Virginia Fight Redistricting Bill

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 4. (Spl.).—From interested circles in the Eastern Panhandle come objections to a bill introduced in the House of Delegates at Charleston by Delegate L. E. Lantz, Democrat, of Jacksonburg, Wetzel County, whereby Hampshire County would be added to the three counties, Berkeley, Jefferson and Morgan, now the twenty-third judicial circuit, with the four-county circuit to be renumbered the Eighth Circuit. The Lantz bill would redistrict the entire State as to judicial circuits. Grant, Hardy, Mineral and Pendleton would constitute the Seventh Circuit.

The effect of the Lantz bill locally would be to double the present Democratic majority in this judicial circuit, it was pointed out by interested commentators here.

The present three-county circuit has about 3,000 more Democrats registered than Republicans. Hampshire has about 3,400 preponderance of registered Democrats over Republicans. Therefore the addition of Hampshire would bring the registered majority of the Democrats to about 6,000.

Undismayed by larceny after trust charges filed by her mother, Mrs. George S. Scarlett, the former Miss Jane Cooke, bestows a wifely greeting on her chauffeur husband as he is leaving the office of State's Attorney James H. Pugh in Rockville, Md., Courthouse after posting $1,000 bond.

Scarlett Hearing Set Thursday; He and Jane 'Happy as Larks'

Chauffeur Released on $1,000 Bond at Rockville; Denies Charges; Says $69.50, Part of Salary Advance, Financed Their Honeymoon.

"Happy as larks" and appearing to make the bridegroom's legal entanglements only an interlude in the honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Scarlett—chauffeur and Chevy Chase society girl—embraced frequently yesterday before Scarlette was released on bond of $1,000 at Rockville.

Preliminary hearing of the larceny after trust charge against the young chauffeur, brought by the bride's mother, Mrs. Howard DeWalden Cooke, will be in Montgomery County Police Court in Rockville, on Thursday, State's Attorney James H. Pugh announced. Mrs. Cooke has been summoned to appear.

Scarlett and the former Miss Jane Cooke arrived in Washington yesterday accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Talmadge Zipperer, who arrested Scarlett Saturday following the couple's crash with a switch engine in Savannah, Ga. They registered at the Grafton Hotel and then went to Rockville, where Zipperer turned the chauffeur over to county authorities.

The warrant against Scarlett charged larceny of $5,000 worth of jewels. After Pugh talked with the young man he said that he had denied ever having seen any of the jewels except a ring which he had seen on Mrs. Cooke's finger. Scarlett denied taking anything of Mrs. Cooke's and declared that he loved Jane.

The couple told reporters that they had been having a glorious time. "We are happy and nothing Mrs. Cooke can do will ever break us up," Scarlett said. "As soon as we get this straightened out we are going to Miami to live." He hopes to get a job there.

In denying that he had stolen anything, Scarlett told the State's attorney that he believed Mrs. Cooke had possession of the jewels after he left with the two girls. He said that the honeymoon was financed on $69.50, of which $37.50 was his. Of the $37.50, he said, $20 was advance salary paid him by Mr. Cooke.

Mrs. Scarlett, her sister Anna, who aided in the elopment, and the girl's aunt, Mrs. John J. Madigan, declared that the warrant was an attempt by Mrs. Cooke to force the return of "her darling Jane."

Jane said that she was going to take the light roadster which was recovered by the family after the elopment. "It's my car and we are going to need it for our honeymoon," she said. She added that the family could have the sedan—the car which was in the Savannah collision.

The bride's father, Howard De Walden Coo'e, has been attempting for several days to have the warrant nolle prossed. State's Attorney Pugh would not do this but said yesterday: "If the evidence at the hearing does not substantiate the warrant and I do not believe he should be held, I will say so."

Contest to Decide Designer Of New Reserve Bank Here

Nine Architectural Concerns Compete for Award; Structure's Completion by 1937 Is Aim of Board.

The first announcement of plans for the new building, to be erected in Constitution avenue opposite the Lincoln Memorial, was made yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board.

At present housed in rented quarters in a downtown office building, the board is contemplating erection of a monumental home which will be designed by the architect who wins the national competition for the award.

Only nine architectural concerns that have received invitations to participate and programs containing terms and conditions will be eligible to compete. They are Arthur Brown, jr., of San Francisco; Coolidge, Shepley, Bulfinch & Abbott, of Boston; Paul Philippe Cret, Philadelphia; Delano & Aldrich, New York; Holabird & Root, Chicago; John Russell Pope, New York; James Gamble Rogers, New York; Egerton Swartout, New York, and York & Sawyer, New York.

A jury composed of three architects and two laymen will pass upon the designs. As appointed by the Federal Reserve Board it consists of John W. Cross and John Mead Howells, New York, and William Emerson, Boston, architects; Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Adolph C. Miller, a member of the Reserve Board.

It is hoped, said the announcement, that the architectural award will be made by the middle of May, the construction contract let before the end of this year and that the building will be completed and ready for occupancy in the spring of 1937.

Everett V. Meeks, dean of the School of Fine Arts at Yale University, prepared the program for the architectural competition. Approved by the Fine Arts and National Capital Park and Planning commissions and the American Institute of Architects, it provides "that the exterior design of the building should be carefully studied and developed in order that a building shall result which will at the same time satisfy the requirements of utility and beauty."

The esthetic appeal of the edifice will be made "through dignity of conception, purity of line, proportion and scale rather than through stressing of merely decorative or monumental features."

Columns, pediments and other ornamental devices which are conspicuous in the Federal triangle will be omitted or restricted to a minimum, if present recommendations are followed.

Baby's Cries Save Parents in Blaze

Forum's Records Burned in Apartment Fire.

A baby's cries early yesterday awakened his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Tucker, of the 800 block of Fourteenth street northwest, when fire broke out in the living room of their fourth-floor apartment.

Seizing the 19-month-old child, John Stuart Tucker, they escaped from the building. The blaze, which caused an estimated damage of $150, resulted in serious back injuries to Fire Sergt. Murchel Lamp, 50, who slipped and fell down the concrete stairway at the rear of the building. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

The fire destroyed personal property of the Tuckers, and ruined the records of the Washington Open Forum, of which Mr. Tucker is secretary.

Aid to Crippled And Free Texts Asked by Kump

Own Social Security Plan Offered by Governor of West Virginia.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—A broad program of social security, the providing of free textbooks for school children, greater aid to the poor, and more assistance to crippled children play a big part in the increased expenditures Gov. Kump asked the Legislature today to authorize for the two years from July 1, 1935, to June 30, 1937.

A "medium" security prison to help relieve congestion at the State penitentiary also was asked by the Governor.

At the same time he presented estimates of revenues showing receipts approximately $140,000 above the proposed spending totals.

With it goes the customary expenditures for operation of all State departments and institutions, bringing the total budget figure to $8,844,183 more than was spent in the two years ending June 30, 1935.

Relief calls for expenditure of $3,000,000 annually. Similar sums have been provided annually by the State. The Federal Government has contributed $37,000,000 since 1932.

Law enforcement problems were given a large share of attention by the Governor in recommending an increase of $260,000 a year for the State police department to increase personnel and provide telegraphic communication systems between State police stations.

Break in Gas Main Blamed for Blast

Slight Damage Caused to Winchester Store.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—A broken gas main on Piccadilly street tonight was believed responsible for the blast Saturday night which broke the window of a grocery store here as the manager switched out the lights preparatory to closing.

The blast was believed to have been caused by a spark coming in contact with a mixture of gases in a cellar poorly ventilated. Slight damage was done to the building and no one was injured.

Gas company officials described the blast as "a push." Workmen, who have been drilling test holes in a search for a leaking main, said tonight they believe the break in the line has been found.

Hapsburg Duke Escapes Death

Hungarian Pretender Sails Iceboat Past Fissure and Rocks.

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 4 (AP).—Luck and skill, traveling at a 60-mile-an-hour race in an iceboat, saved the Hapsburg pretender to the vacant throne of Hungary from death today.

An iceboat accompanying the Archduke of Albrecht's craft on a wild dash across Lake Balaton plunged into a suddenly opened fissure in the ice, drowning five men.

The 47-year-old archduke and his crew careened perilously close to open water, dodged a looming rock pile and reached safety on stronger ice near the shore.

Watchers on the shore heard the ice cracking up because of warm weather, and saw the archduke's sail craft speeding straight for open water.

The archduke said he and his companions found themselves on a narrow lane of ice, with water on both sides. The craft was swung around a pile of rocks which apparently blocked the path.

Archduke Albrecht is widely known and admired among fellow countrymen as a sportsman. He was recently elected president of the Hungarian Fencing Association. He and his royal cousin, the Archduke Otto, were recently reported to have divided their aspiration for a return to the throne, Otto devoting his attention to Austria while Albrecht concentrated on Hungary.

Crime Probers Demand Proof In D.C. Charges

Witnesses to Be Required to Tell Names, Places, in Laxity Claims.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Specific charges involving police and other law enforcement officials are to be heard from witnesses placed under oath by the District crime investigating committee, Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, comterday after a brief meeting behind closed doors.

The witnesses are to be required to give names, times and places involved in the irregularities they have informally charged.

Their stories are to be heard with none present but themselves and members of the committee, and each charge will be fully investigated by the committee and punitive action initiated when evidence is deemed sufficient, Representative Randolph said.

Several persons, some of them women and some members of the police department, have brought stories to committee members, but have insisted they must be protected. In its determination to protect witnesses and persuade them to talk freely the committee may decide to keep secret their names as well as their stories.

Subpena Power Expected.

Authority to subpena witnesses and records and to put witnesses under oath is expected to be conferred on the committee by the House today. Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, favorably reported the authorizing resolution yesterday and said he expected its adoption this afternoon.

Decision of the committee to hear detailed charges in secret came after hearings in which Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, has protested against charges aimed at members of his department and demanded he be given specific information on which to proceed against the accused officers.

Maj. Brown previously had asked that he be allowed to be present and hear all accusations made by witnesses. His repeated requests for that privilege were refused.

Aims to Find Weaknesses.

"The purpose of the committee," Representative Randolph said in reply to his last request, "is to ascertain what, if any, weaknesses exist in the law-enforcement machinery of the District of Columbia, and on its findings to submit a report to the House and seek such legislation as might be necessary to strengthen the law and increase the protection to which the people in the National Capital are entitled.

"If the committee has made any mistakes I regret it, but I will say the committee will not be sidetracked but will adhere to its purpose."

Announcement of his purpose to introduce a bill legalizing gambling in the District was made by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, while Inspector L. I. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police, was on the witness stand. Inspector Edwards was the only witness heard. Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, is to take the stand when the hearings are resumed at 10:30 a. m. today.

Predicts $1,000,000 Revenue.

Representative Schulte predicted his gambling law would produce $1,000,000 in revenue for the District.

"The police and law enforcement authorities in the District of Columbia are handicapped by pressure being brought to bear on them by Government officials seeking to save their friends," Representative Theodore B. Werner (Democrat), of South Dakota, said.

"Do you know of any specific case?" demanded Representative Schulte.

"Yes, I do, and I'll tell you about it off the record."

Representative Schulte sought to develop through questions asked of Inspector Edwards support for his criticism of the present civil service system of promotion for police.

"Isn't it a fact that your duties, particularly those relating to statistics, could be performed by an ordinary policeman?" he asked the inspector.

"Of course not," Inspector Edwards replied.

Qualified, Inspector Says.

"If it were not for the civil service examinations could you have qualified for your present position? Do you think you are qualified to hold your position as inspector?"

"Yes, I do."

"Do you think promotions should be made strictly on the basis of civil service examinations?"

"Not entirely. I think a man should come through each rank and should be selected for promotion because of his ability and record of performance."

"I have received many complaints and have been told that men from the Traffic Bureau have been made lieutenants despite the fact they have had little or no experience in police work other than as traffic officers."

Knows of One Instance.

"I know of one instance where a man in the Traffic Bureau rendered such outstanding service in the apprehension of automobile thieves that he was transferred to the detective bureau," Inspector Edwards said.

A brief forecast of the committee's intention to investigate operation of the District attorney's office was given by Representative Randolph in the course of complimenting the police for apprehending men charged with holding up and shooting a street car motorman.

"This hold-up reemphasizes the type of crime this committee proposes to give its principal attention," he said. "The public is entitled best possible protection against this stripe of criminal.

"If the men arrested are guilty it is my sincere hope we won't witness the spectacle of postponements and delays but that they will be brought speedily to trial."

Father and Mother Of Quintuplets Off On Chicago Trip

Toronto, Feb. 4 (AP).—Papa and Mama Dionne, humble young farmer parents of the only living set of quintuplets in the world, were ready to board a train for Chicago tonight as guests of a vaudeville promoter for their first glimpse of the bright lights.

Papa Oliva Dionne wants to see the stock yards. He is farther from his Callandar farm home now than he ever has been in his life, but everybody has heard of the Chicago stock yards. Max Helperin, the Dionnes' host, said he would take them there.

"Then we'll show them a night club or two," said Halperin, who admitted he was financing the journey in the hope it would serve as a "build-up" for a vaudeville contract.

Executive Curb On Works Bill Gains in Scope

posed for work relief. Prominent Democratic members of the committee believe there is little chance this week of passing the combined measure at one stroke.

Spending Checkup Urged.

A number of influential Senators are determined that the usual check on expenditures, maintained by the Comptroller General's office, be continued in force, despite the so-called "emergency" character of the legislation. Other amendments probably will be offered to preserve the restriction.

The Administration is not expected to raise any serious objection to the committee move to eliminate power for the President to "guarantee loans to, or payments of, needy individuals." From the outset, White House spokesman have insisted the provision entails only a small expenditure, possibly as low as $10,000, but committee members object to its broad implications.

Another provision, enabling the President to make "grants, loans or contracts," is expected to be substantially amended, as well as authorization for the White House to acquire real property by purchase or "eminent domain" and dispose of it.

"Earmarking" Is Blocked.

Friends of the Administration apparently have blocked any major threat of "earmarking" funds for various projects. So far as highway allotments are concerned, however, the committee may accomplish a similar purpose, by stipulating the money be spent by the Bureau of Public Roads, in accordance with past road appropriations.

So far as Demcorats are concerned, the objection to $4,000,000,000 being appropriated as a "lump sum" to be spent by the President, has collapsed.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, declined to discuss in detail the changes proposed by Democrats, but stated emphatically:

"The bill will be modified; there is no doubt about that."

G. O. P. Withholds Action.

Senate Republicans are maintaining a discreet silence pending committee action on the bill. Anxious to prevent injection of a "partisanship" charge, the minority is holding no conferences. There are few Republicans, however, who will not have broad limiting amendments to offer if they are not incorporated by the committee, and the ensuing Senate floor fight will be bitter.

One of the "nonpartisan" issues that threatens to come to a head on the floor is the insistence of a number of Democrats and Republicans alike that "prevailing" wages be maintained on Government projects. The President plans to pay those aided by work relief about $50 a month, thus lessening the incentive to work for the Government, and stimulating a return to private employment. Senate critics insist that instead it will lower the entire wage structure.

2 Gunmen Kill Chicago's Czar Of Movie Union

$350,000 he earned but neglected to report from 1929 to 1933.

"At 12:50 p. m., said Quinn, "I drove over to Maloy's home. I had his black sedan. We met there and then drove to a stable where he had some saddle horses.

"Then we headed downtown for the union offices. I had noticed two men with their coat collars turned up riding in a black coupe. They drove pretty close to us. They wore black hats.

"I noticed Maloy look over to the men, but he didn't pay any further attention to them so I figured it was all right. Then they crowded up against us and started firing."

Scarcely had the death car stopped than Special Assistant United States Attorney Joseph P. O'Connell, who obtained the income tax indictments against Maloy, drew up alongside. He had been driving just a short distance behind the Maloy car.

Authorities believe the assassins may have been disgruntled members of the union which Maloy founded in 1917 or racketeers who were attempting to muscle in on the huge organization. Several previous attempts had been made on Maloy's life and less than a year ago he was reported to have been a victim of a $50,000 kidnaping, the ransom allegedly being paid by the union.

Maloy had been questioned in connection with three slayings—one of them that of Fred Oser, ousted member of the union killed in Maloy's offices. Ralph O'Hara, Maloy's right-hand man, was acquitted of the killing.

The labor leader has been threatened many times and was fired upon once but the only injury he suffered was from a brick hurled at him as he rode horseback through a park. He had been arrested for graft, extortion, conspiracy and assault and battery but always won exoneration.

Difficulties between the union and independent theater owners several times tied up the city's $75,000,000 movie house properties and provoked bombings, sluggings and sniping.

Arlington Gain InConstruction For '35 Shown

$78,300 Expenditure in January Far Above 1934 Total.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 300. Clarendon, Va.

Building operations during January in Arlington County showed a marked increase over last year, according to the records in the office of the county manager.

There were 18 permits issued for new homes representing an outlay of $76,850 and six for improvements to existing homes costing $1,450, making a total expenditure in building operations for the month of $78,300.

In January, 1934, there were 20 permits issued representing an expenditure of $53,157. In 1933 the expenditure was $49,835.

Thomas Henry Wills, 86, retired Government Printing Office bookbinder, died yesterday at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Dorothy Wills Thompson, 139 Strong street, Lyon Village, Arlington County.

Born in Albany, N. Y., Mr. Wills came to Washington in 1895.

After retiring from the Government service in 1925 he continued to reside in Washington for several years, later going to Baltimore. He had made his home with Mrs. Thompson in Lyon Village for the past four years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ann Wills, one son, Wewsher Wills, of Philadelphia; several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Bookbinders Union at 8 p. m. today at C. J. Ives Funeral Chapel in Clarendon. The body will be taken to Albany for burial.

County Manager Roy S. Braden yesterday announced that all department heads are now preparing their respective budgets for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The total budget will be in the hands of the county board at its meeting on March 14. At that time the board will authorize that it be advertised for 30 days, after which a public hearing will be held prior to its final adoption.

One item which it is understood is giving the county manager some concern is that for road improvement and maintenance during the coming year.

With the installation of the county-wide sewerage system practically every road in the county will need rebuilding. There has been provided approximately $170,000 in the program for sewer installation to take care of the roads. It is most doubtful, it is said, if this will take care of the conditions which now exist.

The Arlington County Civic Federation at its meeting tonight in the Lyon Park Community Hall will receive and act upon a number of recommendations from the executive committee.

The newly appointed standing committees as announced by the executive committee are as follows:

9 Ask Permits For Hog Farms

Fairfax County Board Will Start Hearings Under New Ordinance.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The board of supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., will consider nine applications for permits to operate, conduct and maintain commercial hog farms in the county at its meeting tomorrow. These are the first to come under the new county ordinance adopted December 10.

Public hearing on the applications will start at 2 p. m. Those whose permit applications are to be considered include Vernon M. Lynch, J. B. Dowden, Thomas A. Byrne, W. W. Cox, C. D. Kindig and J. B. Eagle, all of Falls Church district; Jordan Brothers and Craum, Lee maisterial district; C. B. Hibbs and David O'Roark, both of Providence magisterial district.

Permits to operate commercial hog farms in the county may be granted only by the board after a public hearing has been held. Each application must be advertised at least two weeks prior to the hearing.

Garbage-feeding hog farms will be virtually eliminated in the county in three years, under the ordinance, since it provides that after three years from its adoption, it shall be unlawful to use garbage for the feeding of pigs or hogs. It also will be unlawful to transport garbage on public roads.

The Fairfax County School Board will hold its regular monthly meeting today in the courthouse. The board will begin its annual consideration of the budget.

A Defender Of The Law.

The power of Congress to determine how public funds shall be spent can be nullified in more ways than one. The first and most obvious method is for the legislative branch of government to delegate to the Executive its right to determine how public money shall be spent. Another way is to curb the power of the Comptroller General to disallow expenditures. Under present conditions, if Comptroller General McCarl were denied the right to demand a strict accounting from every executive official who disburses public funds, safeguards against abuse of spending powers would be flimsy indeed.

The rulings of the Comptroller General which have caused him to be viewed with disfavor by those whose projects have been balked, afford the best possible proof of the value of his services to the country. His insistence that the law must be followed shows how necessary it is to provide the protection which his office affords against executive usurpation or defiance of legislative authority. Rumors that a plan is under way to deprive Mr. McCarl of his power to interfere with spending projects serve only to emphasize the reckless and irresponsible attitude of some officials.

The controversy over the work relief bill, for instance, has been brought sharply into the open by demands that Congress jealously guard its rights to determine the character of expenditures. If Congress should insist upon exercising its power to direct executive spending, the Comptroller General is the man who now provides the chief assurance that the wishes of the Legislature will be observed.

Of what avail would be a law outlining the purposes for which funds might be expended, if executive officers could supply their own interpretations of that law to suit their spending desires? So long as the Comptroller General is free to exercise his powers to disallow appropriations, it seems certain that the intention of Congress and the purpose of the laws will be fulfilled with reasonable fidelity. If Comptroller McCarl has been over-meticulous upon occasion, the fault is minimized by the number of errors in the opposite direction.

The Value Of Facts.

In a preliminary report the Federal Power Commission has undertaken to show the charges for electric service to residential consumers of electricity in all cities with populations in excess of 50,000. The commission emphasizes the fact that the investigation does not undertake to determine the reasonableness of the rates charged either by private utilities or by municipal plants. The results of its inquiry, however, show the pressing need for analysis of the extraordinary variations in rates, with a view to developing standards by which to judge the adequacy of the performance in individual cases. Fact-finding, indeed, is a necessary preliminary to inteligent efforts to fix rates.

It does not follow of course that uniformity of the rate structure throughout the country is possible, but there is certainly need to discover the reasons for the great discrepancies in rates charged for similar service under conditions of much the same character. One fact already brought out is that regulation by the States has not helped to introduce greater uniformity in charges. According to the commission, some discrepancies may be due to unprogressive rate policies while others are caused by conditions beyond the control of the companies.

However, the extraordinary range in rates of charge is proof positive that many rate schedules are in need of revision. The first step has been taken by assembling up-to-date information which will call the attention of local communities to the desirability of revisions, or at least the need for analyses that will demonstrate the reasonableness or unreasonableness of existing charges.

Local Rents.

The recent decision of the Board of Trade to oppose any move to regulate rents in the District was logical, but subject to discount for two reasons. The interests of the board are predominantly those of local property owners. And members of Congress will not be easily balked in this matter because, in contrast with many other local problems, they are personally affected by the unsatisfactory conditions.

It is ineffective to compare the present housing situation with the wartime emergency. Though the present inflow to Washington may be comparable, conditions today are much more likely to become permanent. Would, then, restriction of rents be effective? Unless legislation is very carefully drawn its results may well be disappointing. Similar efforts were attempted in many European capitals following the war, but all sorts of devices crept in to nullify the expected benefits. Although maximums were observed in the letter of the contracts, leases were available only on payment of bonuses of one form or another.

The real solution, which would also be in line with the national recovery program, lies in increased building. So long as there is an acute housing shortage, landlords can demand and tenants will pay rents far out of proportion to the apparent value of the accommodations received. To eliminate all profiteering is highly desirable. But Congressmen who feel the pinch would react most constructively by doing their utmost to expedite the housing program, rather than by grumbling at an all but inevitable consequence of the local problem in that field.

Olive Branch, With Thorns.

The Anglo-French conversations, culminating in the joint statement issued in London on Sunday night, have sought to carry a long step further the progress embodied in two recent diplomatic achievements—the Saar plebiscite and the Franco-Italian agreement.

The return of the Saar to Germany is cited, although without naming the territory, as an illustration of a conciliatory spirit in France. Germany is asked to regard the understanding on Austrian independence recently reached by France and Italy in the same spirit. Great Britain now associates herself with this agreement by stating that she will expect to be consulted "if the independence and integrity of Austria is menaced." And the British and French governments seek to round out and consolidate recent gains for peace by suggesting to Germany "direct and effective cooperation" in future.

This, of course, means that Germany should cancel her notice of withdrawal from the League of Nations, which does not become effective until October, and again collaborate actively at Geneva. For such action the government of Premier Flandin is prepared to pay a price which many in France will be disposed to regard as high. Acting with the British government he will sponsor a sweeping revision of the Versailles Treaty to establish "equality of rights in a system of security." Such action, failure to secure which caused Germany's withdrawal from the league and the Disarmament Conference, would eliminate the most intolerable, because the most insulting, of the penalties imposed upon Germany at the close of the war.

Since it is common knowledge that Germany has already taken the law into her own hands with regard to certain types of rearming, a further step is embodied in the Anglo-French communique. This is the development of an "air Locarno," pledging mutual assistance of the proposed signatories—Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Germany—to any one of them which might be the victim of aerial aggression by another. Such a regional security agreement would be entirely in line with the general development of peace machinery under the league aegis. But its introduction in this form shows that the English take the German air threat very seriously.

Great Britain and France have gone a long way in making these suggestions. Whether they have gone far enough to satisfy Germany remains to be seen. The Nazis have been proceeding on the assumption that the Reich is strong enough to make her own demands, rather than to accept the concessions of others. In order to save face at home the immediate reaction of the German government will probably be highly skeptical, if not actually hostile.

But Hitler is doubtless astute enough to realize that the Anglo-French offer is based on strength rather than weakness. French diplomacy had secured the reiterated and tangible support of both Italy and Great Britain before this cooperative offer was made in London.

A Pioneer.

The universality of science is implicit in the obituary of Hugo Junkers. Modern technics of both war and peace stem in large measure from the genius of this Rhenish engineer who died in Munich Sunday on his seventy-sixth birthday. No one familiar with the World War will fail to recall the strategic advantage afforded the German air forces by the introduction of the Junkers plane, and the consequent revolution in air design and tactics in the camps of all belligerents. Probably fewer realize that one-third of the world's air service today is maintained by planes bearing the name of Junkers, while his theories and inventions are embodied throughout the entire field of airplane design.

Following an extensive training in German polytechnical schools, Junkers successively organized a heating appliance factory, held a professorship, conceived the indispensable device for measuring a motor's heating power during combustion, patented an oil-driven motor combined with an all-metal plane in 1910, supplied the German command with planes during the war, and organized the first mail and passenger air line in the world. Moreover, a Junkers plane established the endurance record of 66 hours, surpassed only when refueling was adopted in the United States.

In 1928, Baron von Huenefeld, flying with Capt. Koehl and Col. Fitzmaurice, piloted a Junkers plane in the first east-west flight across the North Atlantic. One of his last achievements, at the age of 71, was the design of an oil motor capable of lifting a plane carrying mail and 100 passengers as well as a crew of 10.

From logarithms and portable gas stoves, Prof. Junkers blazed the trail to present-day commercial flying. His accomplishments do not pass with him, for aviation still leans heavily on his discoveries. His epitaph will be cut in international letters. It is partly as a result of his genius that the world is taking to wings today.

Speaking For Labor.

Presumably by virtue of his office as president of the American Federation of Labor, William Green brands as traitors to labor those Government officials who have been instrumental in securing a temporary extension of the automobile code, without attempting to force a reduction of working hours below 48 per week.

Mr. Green asserts the right of the federation to "represent the membership of 170 local automobile unions composed of thousands of members," and insists that the way in which the code has been imposed upon the industry "smacks of Fascism in the most aggravated form." Such denunciations might be justified if the A. F. of L. had been selected by a majority of automobile workers to represent their interest and to press for changes in wages and hours under the code. That, however, has not been the case.

Elections at which automobile workers freely select the men whom they wish to represent them in collective bargaining negotiations are now being conducted by the Automobile Labor Board. In 12 Detroit plants employing slightly over 60,000 persons, almost 41,000 have recorded themselves as not affiliated with any labor organization, whether company union, A. F. of L. or other types. Under the circumstances Mr. Green's charges of Fascist tactics savor of sour grapes. All the Government has attempted to do is to protect employes against dictation from any outside group, whether representing labor or capital. This neutral, objective governmental attitude is the very reverse of Fascism.

It is as yet impossible to predict whether the present methods of election will insure an effective form of industrial unionism, or whether the new unions will degenerate into company-dominated organizations, as critics assert. Nevertheless, it is obvious that the American Federation of Labor is at present not representative of the automobile workers. If it is able to persuade the workers that their interests will be best served by allying themselves with the A. F. of L., no obstacles to such affiliation stand in the way. Hence it seems an open confession of weakness to cry "traitor" and turn upon Government officials who have by their past records and recent performances shown that they sympathize with the aspirations of labor and seek only to forward them without favoritism to any privileged group.

The attack of A. F. of L. leaders upon Mr. Richberg seems especially indefensible in view of the substantial concessions that were made to labor in prolonging the operation of the automobile code. Furthermore, as the new head of the NRA says, a Government official in his position should not be an advocate of any class. He is supposed to represent the public and to reach decisions that are in the interest of the people at large.

If the A. F. of L. can prove that the public welfare has been betrayed by the acts of those in authority, it may justifiably hurl a charge of "traitor" at offenders. But before that time comes the leaders of the A. F. of L. will have to show that their alternative plans are preferable and that they have the indorsement of the labor groups affected. The right to act as spokesmen for labor must be won, not claimed as an inalienable right by self-appointed spokesmen.

Literary Plebiscite.

Herself one of America's most able essayists, Mrs. Katherine Fullerton Gerould has started a tempest in the magazine teapot by lamenting the decline of the essay and the rise of the factual "special article." Mrs. Gerould lately observed that the essay is being replaced by mere conglomerations of figures and facts—mostly figures. And this, she said, is not only bad for literature and the public: it really runs contrary to the readers' desires.

Now dissent from these statements dances across the columns of The Saturday Review of Literature. Especially does Mr. Alfred Dashiell, managing editor of Scribner's, report that, among a cross-section of his clientele, each reader who wanted more literary baked meats was outmatched by a half dozen who wanted the raw material of sociology.

If Scribner's public is typical, this would seem to refute Mrs. Gerould's second contention: the contention that the reader prefers literature to statistics. But nobody familiar with the genuine essayist will expect Mrs. Gerould and her school to accept Mr. Dashiell's evaluation. The genuine essayist will first declare that the plebiscite was conducted among readers already tainted by the "special article" habit—and will then assert that the essay is better for every reader's soul, anyhow, and that all readers should be compelled to take their medicine regardless of their tastes.

Constructive suggestion may be looked for only from a disinterested critic. It remains for him to suggest that the essay can be made more factual without losing its literary merits, and that the special article can be made more literary without becoming less factually informative.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

"Dangerous Fantasies."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The powerful warning given by Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, in his recent Saturday Evening Post article as to the grave dangers to the country of reckless Government extravagance and budget hugely out of balance should demand thoughtful consideration by all citizens, even though it may send a chill down the spine to read of "disaster of unprecedented magnitude and indescribably terrible consequences" if the Government does not more carefully conserve its credit.

Senator Bailey, who is a very loyal Democrat, if not a very ardent New Dealer, does not place blame where I think it largely belongs—on President Roosevelt, whose ear is always so attentive to "liberals" with other people's money and to "progressives" in adding billions to the public debt.

It looks like President Roosevelt has lost much of his own budgetary balance. With an obsession for dams and power houses, he has been led on to vast extravagances in all kinds of public works, largely wholly unnecessary and wasteful. Naturally, Congressmen and their constituents became infected with his exuberant spirit of big spending and pressed for huge amounts of the easy money for pork in their respective districts.

Now the President probably does worry over the tremendous pressure from all directions to spend billions and more billions. He seems particularly vexed that the veterans want their bonus debt from the Government paid right now instead of in 1945. But he can hardly blame the veterans if they want to get their money before the Treasury gets busted and the dollars get baloney. He seems troubled over the Townsend demand to pay men beyond 60 as much as $200 a month. Many of these men have seen their life savings eliminated through his own warfare against their investments. He says the Townsend scheme is "fantastic," but who but himself opened the floodgate of dangerous fantasies of the abundant life? HENRY D. BAKER.

Don't Change Coolidge.

It was the most winning characteristic of the late Calvin Coolidge that in none of his public manifestations did he once step out of character. The stories about him and attributed to him, real and otherwise, made of him a type in which there was no discordant note, and a type which biographers hereafter will be quite powerless to change. On the whole, it was a type which, by its very lack of the demonstrative friendliness of his predecessor, endeared itself to the common mind.

We think it an unfortunate choice of words which represents Grace Coolidge in a current magazine article as trying to make the late President a "human" being. The word "human" is a flexible epithet, which signifies among other qualities a disposition to slap backs, to mix with the company and take the barytone part in "Sweet Adeline"—qualities which Coolidge never had. But in the less expansive meanings of the term, in the almost daily revelations of character in word and deed and point of view, he was human enough. He was not human in the sense that his antithesis, Harding, was, and it is as pointless now to try to make him so as it is to alter any type in history, once it is crystallized. It is a little extraordinary to us that anyone would try.

Orchids And Plums.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a long-time reader of The Post, I feel moved now and then to express to you the pleasure which I derive from it, and to say how much it means to one living a somewhat shut-in life. Each day after scanning the news (and avoiding the Hauptmann trial as far as is possible), I turn eagerly to the editorial page, where one may hear discussed the topics of the day in a manner fair and impartial, and most enlightening.

Letters to the Editor are entertaining and quite diverting, although expressing at times strange theories, of one kind and another. While the "Letters" are given space in your paper, there should be no further need of an open forum, or of Town meeting activities.

Every one, I am sure, has his or her favorites among columnists and correspondents, so I will mention Dr. Lyon Phelps, Mr. Phillips, and Mr. Bargeron. Mr. Phillips gave us a masterpiece in his "Once Over" of January 28, and now and then both he and Mr. Bargeron sparkle up, and outdo themselves in showing up absurdities of the present time, political and social.

As for the Sunday Post, the first page we turn to is the one which contains Miss Elisabeth Poe's charming articles on celebrities of the past. There we search among her pedigrees for plums that may accrue to us who are genealogically minded. It is to be hoped that her section may long continue to flourish. (Mrs.) B. C. S.

Adequate Reference.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been called to an editorial in The Post for November 22 last entitled, "Population Planning." In it you refer evidently to an address which I gave a day or two before at the Country Life Conference. May I express to you my appreciation of this editorial. It is well-balanced, you summarized my thoughts very well, and you made no mistakes in interpretation. It is rare that I read a newspaper reference to any address that I may give which is so adequate and so satisfactory. O. E. BAKER.

More On The World Court

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have followed your editorials on the defeat of the World Court resolution with a great deal of interest.

As a nation we have not reached the age of reason. Our acceptance of the cooperative, consultative idea as exemplified by the World Court will mark our coming of age. Until we do we are still the younger member of the family, demanding without giving, in a civilization which must cooperate to exist.

Throughout the most significant of the opposition speeches ran the thought of entire self-reliance and self-sufficiency. A moment's thought will alone show that we, as a nation, would fare no better entirely isolated than the community stranded by the flooding Mississippi, the two ice-bound men on the island in the Potomac, or the snow-bound New Jersey family. In each case they were able to sustain life for a time unassisted, but to survive they needed the assistance of the community.

And, like the irresponsible member of the family, we must have many of the things the rest of the world offers. The world would regret our passing, but could do nicely without us. This is true of any individual nation as it is true of any individual of a nation.

When the people of this country realize fully what the World Court is and what it means to us, we will have taken our place as a responsible citizen of the world community. Until then we are, shall I say, still too young to understand.

JOHN QUINCY.

Washington, Feb. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington and Jefferson counseled us to remain out of European "entanglements." Incidentally, Washington and Jefferson rode in horse-drawn coaches and wore wigs, but we do not. Mr. Leland F. James ought to be informed that the world has changed in 100 years.

This same Mr. James constantly connects the World Court with Europe, i. e., he makes it a national organization rather than an international. But the World Court has never been influenced by the League of Nations or Europe. The league appoints the members and after that has no power over the World Court. It has no more power over the World Court than our Congress has over our Supreme Court.

Mr. James also cites the growth of armaments, the Chaco fighting, and the fighting in the Orient among other things. Did the World Court or League of Nations cause any of these things? They certainly did not, and they could have prevented them if the United States had helped the league. The latter wished to declare an embargo against Japan, the aggressor in the Orient, and asked the cooperation of the United States. Here was our chance to show we were not bluffing when we denounced the rest of the world for their transgressions and shouted for peace. We did not enact an embargo.

The World Court has shown itself to be an international institution. As further proof, in a dispute between France and England, the French judge voted for the English side! Surely, a judge of the Supreme Court would not be partial to his native state.

The World Court settles disputes. It advises which way the question ought to be solved. If the countries should not accept its solution, which has not happened yet, no harm would be done. If it settles satisfactorily the disputes, it has achieved something and probably prevented feelings which lead to war.

Incidentally, we entered the World War even when we supposedly had no entangling alliances with Europe—such as the World Court or the League of Nations.

As to the League of Nations, how can Mr. James or anyone else imagine that it could dominate the United States when each important nation has but one member on the council and a unanimous vote is needed to render an official decision? SAMUEL C. TEMIN.

The Post Impressionist

"Crowded Hours."

Post Office, Tuesday.

ANYHOW, there's one of the Column's readers that can find some good in crowds—at least Washington crowds.

If you're an habitual or enforced member of them, you'll like that crowd-liker's letter. What the Post-Impressionist especially likes is its first part. But we don't believe Sadie will like the second.

Here's almost the whole thing:

"Dear Post-Impressionist:

"I have followed your Column with great interest . . . It was, however, your just and competent rebuke of Sadie that crystallized my intentions to bore you with another of the numerous letters you must continually be receiving from your enthusiastic readers.

"Your total absence of criticism for most of the letters you publish has been a source of increasing wonder to me; so much so that, if I had not encountered you much more frequently in perfect little essays of your own composition—which show you to be a man of discriminating judgment and a thoroughly human person subject to all the unreasoning prejudices that afflict us all—I might have thought my favorite columnist was a weakling. But, though I still suspect you of being an even-tempered individual, I respect you as a man who can stand up and fight to the proverbial bitter end for the thing you believe right . . .

"Your rebuke of Sadie was a welcome surprise. Sadie is an intellectual snob. . . . Her condemnation of crowds is interesting; she exhibits a certain cleverness . . . but she remains a snob . . .

"Let her travel the jammed street cars morning and evening and listen to the talk around her:

"'I'm glad they're at last thinking of staggering the hours for Government employes. I'm so tired pushing my way on and off cars and busses!'

Or:

"'Oh, yes, we went to the Automobile Show, and it was all very interesting; but there were such crowds, Washington's getting terrible.'

"You hear it everywhere. All of us grow tired of living in crowds, but we realize the inevitability of crowded conditions in a city like this, and we accept them as we accept bad weather, or death, or taxes. Crowds simply are. We grumble cheerfully about their unpleasant aspects as we grumble about the melting snow. . . .

"Besides, I'm not so sure crowds are as detestable as Sadie thinks them.

"The other evening I got on the usual crowded street car to come home—overcrowded beyond its ordinary amazing capacity because of the snow which had begun to fall that afternoon. It was so crowded that several people on the rear platform had to get out every time the car stopped to admit passengers. That was a real crowd. But—detestable? Well, hardly! They were jolly, laughing, excited as small boys over the prospect of a new sled and a first snow. In fact, there were two small boys teetering in the aisle who were blissfully calculating how deep the snow was . . . Few of these people knew any of the others; but, before we had gone four blocks, we were talking to one another, holding one another up over the jerks and stops, and laughing together in the friendliest fashion. It was really fun.

"On the other hand, an evening or two later, in a much heavier snow, I got a ride home in a small automobile with just one other person. No crowds there. I should have sat back and complacently contemplated the people fighting to get on the already crowded cars. But I didn't. I arrived home quickly, safely—and dully. It wasn't any fun at all.

"I suppose I must be as detestable as the crowds that Sadie condemns!

"There is only one question I'd like to ask Sadie. I'd like to ask her if she has ever lived in the country, or in a small country town. If she has, she should be able to appreciate humanity in groups and masses.

"Crowds may be detestable. They may tread on your toes and stick elbows in your ribs. They may interrupt your meditations and destroy your peace. But they decidedly have their virtues. And it is no sign of inferiority to enjoy their stimulation. We are become a sad people indeed if a crowd of our own kind can not warm our hearts with their laughter and good cheer.

"It is well that Sadie is complacent in her ivory tower. But, should she ever become lonely there, let her remember that she built the superior structure herself."

So there's a voice from—if not of—the crowd.

It permits us to sign its published record only "Anna Nimity."

But we hasten to assure Sadie—whom we fear more than we fear any other of our readers—that it came to us in the form of a "really-truly" letter.

Here Is The Bill By The Unknown Author

In presenting to its readers the text of the "Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935," now confronting the Senate, The Post apologizes for the strain to which they are being submitted. However, it is fairly easy to understand the proposed legislation after the 332 words in the first sentence have been absorbed. It has been suggested that the bill would be much improved from the drafting viewpoint, and would be unaltered in meaning, if rewritten as follows:

Section 1: The sum of $4,880,000,000 is hereby appropriated to be used by the President as he sees fit.

Section 2: Anybody who doesn't like it shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed $5,000. Regulations under which fines are to be imposed will be made by the President when he gets around to it.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in order to protect and to promote the general welfare, by (1) providing relief from the hardships attributable to widespread unemployment and conditions resulting therefrom, (2) relieving economic maladjustments, (3) alleviating distress, and/or (4) improving living and working conditions, there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used in the discretion and under the direction of the President in such manner, and for such purposes and/or such projects, Federal or non-Federal, as shall be adapted to the accomplishment of any one or more of the objectives specified in clause (1), (2), (3), or (4), to be immediately available and to remain available until June 30, 1937, the sum of $4,000,000,000, together with the separate funds established for particular areas by proclamation of the President pursuant to section 15 (f) of the agricultural adjustment act (but any amounts thereof shall be available for use only for the area for which the fund was established); not exceeding $500,000,000 in the aggregate of any savings or unexpended balances in funds of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; and not exceeding a total of $380,000,000 of such unexpended balances as the President may determine are not required for the purposes for which authorized, of the following appropriations, namely: The appropriation of $3,300,000,000 for national industrial recovery contained in the fourth deficiency act, fiscal year 1933, approved June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 274; the appropriation of $950,000,000 for emergency relief and civil works contained in the act approved February 15, 1934 (48 Stat. 274); the appropriation of $899,675,000 for emergency relief and public works and the appropriation of $525,000,000 to meet the emergency and necessity for relief in stricken agricultural areas, contained in the emergency appropriation act, fiscal year 1935, approved June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1055); and any remainder of the unobligated moneys referred to in section 4 of the act approved March 31, 1933 (48 Stat. 22). The specific powers hereinafter vested in the President shall not be construed as limiting the general powers and discretion vested in him by this section.

• • • •

Sec. 2. The appropriation made herein shall be available for use in the United States and its Territories and possessions, including the Philippine Islands. The provisions of the act of February 15, 1934 (48 Stat. 351), relating to disability or death compensation and benefits shall apply to those persons receiving from the appropriation made herein, for services rendered as employes of the United States, security payments in accordance with schedules established by the President: Provided, That so much of the sum herein appropriated as the United States Employes' Compensation Commission, with the approval of the President, estimates and certifies to the Secretary of the Treasury will be necessary for the payment of such compensation and administrative expenses shall be set aside in a special fund to be administered by the commission for such purposes; and after June 30, 1936, such special fund shall be available for these purposes annually in such amounts as may be specified therefor in the annual appropriation acts. The provisions of section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5) shall not apply to any purchase made or service procured in carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution when the aggregate amount involved is less than $300.

• • • •

Sec. 3. In carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution the President may (a) authorize expenditures for contract stenographic reporting services; supplies and equipment; purchase and exchange of law books, books of reference, directories, periodicals, newspapers and press clippings; travel expenses, including the expense of attendance at meetings when specifically authorized; rental at the seat of government and elsewhere; purchase, operation and maintenance of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles; printing and binding; and such other expenses as he may determine necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of this joint resolution; and (b) accept and utilize such voluntary and uncompensated services, appoint, without regard to the provisions of the civil-service laws, such officers and employes, and utilize such Federal officers and employes, and, with the consent of the State, such State and local officers and employes, as may be necessary, prescribe their authorities, duties, responsibilities, and tenure, and, without regard to the classification act of 1923, as amended, fix the compensation of any officers and employes so appointed.

• • • •

Sec. 4. In carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution the President is authorized, to such extent and in such manner as he finds and prescribes as necessary to the efficient and coordinated administration of the powers exercisable under this joint resolution, to—

(a) Establish and prescribe the duties and functions of governmental agencies (including corporations with corporate authority only as approved by the President and within the scope of this joint resolution);

(b) Utilize and prescribe the duties and functions of any governmental agency (including a corporation);

(c) Consolidate, redistribute, abolish, or transfer the functions and/or duties of, and transfer the property and/or personnel of, any emergency governmental agency (including a corporation); and upon the transfer to another agency and/or the abolition of all the functions and duties of any agency, such agency shall cease to exist; and

(d) Delegate the powers conferred on him under this joint resolution to any governmental agency (including a corporation).

• • • •

Sec. 5. In carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution the President is authorized (within the limits of the appropriation made in section 1)—

(a) To guarantee loans to, or payments of, needy individuals;

(b) to make grants and/or loans and/or contracts; and

(c) to acquire, by purchase or by the power of eminent domain, any real property or any interest therein, and improve, develop, maintain, grant, sell lease (with or without the privilege of purchasing), or otherwise dispose of any such property or interest therein.

• • • •

Sec. 6. The President is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out this joint resolution, and any willful violation of any such rule or regulation shall be punishable by fine of not to exceed $5,000.

• • • •

Sec. 7. A report of the operations under this joint resolution shall be submitted to Congress before the 10th day of January in each of the next three regular sessions of Congress, which report shall include a statement of the expenditures made and obligations incurred, by classes and amounts.

• • • •

Sec. 8. This joint resolution may be cited as the "Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935."

Turkeys Killed By Severe Cold On Eastern Shore

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Recent cold weather, aided by heavy sleet, played havic with poultry flocks on the Eastern Shore, many turkeys being killed. Guineas and turkeys lost their feathers from the cold or sleet. Tail feathers especially were unable to withstand the weight of the sleet. Other birds walked around with ice clinging to them until they died of exposure.

The flocks of J. Culk Kemp, of St. Michaels, formerly of Baltimore and member of the State board of education, were affected, and Ernest Burns lost about 100 choice turkeys.

Mrs. Harry T. Williams, president of the Maryland Turkey Growers Association, reports many prime birds destroyed throughout Maryland, and next year's Thanksgiving supply will be sadly depleted, it is believed.

Jury Difficulties Snag Richmond Bank Probe

Richmond, Feb. 4 (AP).—The often-postponed grand jury investigation of the affairs of the long-closed American Bank & Trust Co. of Richmond was delayed again today—this time until 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Difficulty is being experienced in getting jurors. The nature of the investigation calls for persons versed in finance and banking methods, but most of the bankers have the legitimate excuse that they were connected in some way or biased by the affair. The more than 50,000 depositors of the bank also are barred from service.

Farmer's Body Found On Railroad Tracks

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—The mangled body of Isaac H. Banks, 76, retired farmer, was discovered on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks six miles south of here this morning by the crew of a work train.

Banks left his home afoot yesterday afternoon and was not afterwards seen alive. State's Attorney Rex A. Taylor said investigation indicated the man's death was accidental and an inquest would not be held.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am deject. I am veree deject in the hart, the stummack or the soul, wherever it ess little mans gets deject. I read, Missa Haworth, about Napoleon, little mans who talka big and talka much and as soon as he quitta talking big and much, as soon as he leava town, the Widder Josephine, she goes places and doesa things with mans who not talka much or talka big.

BARGERON.

I can not understand, Missa Haworth. Was the only hold he had over the Widder Josephine was when he talka much and talka big and when he quit talka big and much to her he had no hold over her at all.

Is it necessaire, Missa Haworth that little mans must talka much and big and talka all the time to hold his lady love? You know so much Missa Haworth, about mans and womans harts, I feela like you can tella me dis.

• • • •

There ees Mista Hauptmann who no talka much and big but about whom I reads the womans make cuckoo eyes at. He is not little mans. He only looka at womans and no talka at all and womans come right back with twinkle in her eyes saying a liot of devil-like things. He has what ze calls "eet."

I reada Napoleon's fiery love letters. He usa sweet langwidge. He usa big langwidge. He says he conquer Italy. He says he waker up full of Josephine. Bah, he waker up full of nothing.

Hissa letters do no good. Josephine will not write to him. Yet when he is in her presence and talka much and talka big he is what you call her sweet patootie.

• • • •

Ah, she say to him, when he is with her and talka big and talka much, she say, you are fascinate, little mans, you sweep me off my feet, you talka so grand. But when he slower down and not talka so much she feels her ardor cooling and she say: "Come on, little mans, talka much and talka big to me."

I imagine, Missa Haworth, that after he talka much and talka big, she enfolds little mans in her widowy arms and when she squeezer him and cut off his breath he can not talka much and talka big and her ardor cools for him and her widowy grip relaxs, whereupon he wonders what has happens, not knowing it is because he no talka big and talka much.

• • • •

I see also the picture, Missa Haworth, of little mans walking up and down in front of her in their drawing room with his hand thrust in his coat and talking big and talking much and her looking at him and knowing her hart, saying to herself as womans do, "Little mans, you betta talka big and talka much and talka all the time because that is your great asset."

It all maker me wonder, Missa Haworth, if this is why our little mans always talka so much and so big, not necessarily little mans of stature, Missa Haworth, but little mans of ability. Do they know they must talka all the time and talka big and talka much to have any success at holding Lady Luck. Tom Heflin used to talka much and talka big. His bigger talk and mucho talk mesmerized everybody within sound of his voice and mesmerized Tom himself.

There is Father Coughlin, he talka much and talka big. He's a mesmerizer, too.

• • • •

I am greatly fright, Missa Haworth, Mussa little mans talk all the time? Can't little mans tell his sweet patootie loving words and poetry words and then leave her for awhile on her own. Why can't he do this when big mans like Hauptmann do not have to talk at all?

Little mans who has to talka much and talka big all the time never has any time to kiss. Little mans who is tongue-tied has no chance at all.

It ees ze contemplation terrible, Missa Haworth. It gives one zee creeps. I write you to ask if it ees true, Miss Haworth.

Must little mans be a graphaphone? Your truly, WORRIED.

Canada's Oldest Man.

Corbeil, Ont., (U.P.).—Within 10 miles of this village, birthplace of the Dionne quintuplets, lives a man who spent over 100 years in this district before ever being mentioned in the news. While world interest centers on the quintuplets John Birch is almost overlooked, although he is believed to be the oldest man in Canada. Last June 4 he celebrated his 111th birthday.

No End Of Books

Four Stories By Rebecca West Show Her Enjoyment Of Play With Probe And Scalpel.

By Theodore Hall.

READING Rebecca West last night, I was reminded of an anecdote which H. G. Wells and coauthors tell in their "Science of Life." It seems that Miss West was attending a spiritualist seance at which a control, speaking from the abode of the spirits, announced himself as "Grandfather West" and addressed her familiarly as "Rebecca." Miss West, we are given to understand, became "emotional."

You may have one guess as to the quality of that emotion—"Rebecca West" is a penname taken from a character in an Ibsen play; the writing lady's genuine surname is Fairfield.

Which is something like the time I visited a spiritualists' summer camp in western New York State. At a trumpet-session where the voices of the departed great were being summoned into the darkened room, it occurred to me—not without a grain of malice—to ask the medium to put in a call for George Sand. The request was eminently successful. In booming, masculine tones which fairly vibrated with whiskers, there came to us the discourse (in good up-state American) of Mme. Amantine Lucile Aurore Dudevant, inamorata of de Musset and Chopin.

• • • •

But I was speaking of Rebecca West—to drop quotation marks and use the name she's chosen—and her latest book: "The Harsh Voice" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50). The voice in question here is that of money or hate, speaking in four brief novelettes (or long short stories, as you choose) of a rather wry, ironic flavor.

"Life Sentence" tells the story of a man whose wife never forgives him for flinching just before their wedding day. With that Indian sign on him, his marriage becomes precisely the life sentence he feared—until it cracks. "The Abiding Vision" brings a twist to the theme of the successful middle-aged man who comes to hate the worn-out face of the wife who helped him rise. Taking a young mistress, who stands by him through the depression, Sam Hartley ends up by hating her for her ageing, faithful look. He still clings to his abiding vision of young and lovely faces.

Better than these is a murder tale, "The Salt of the Earth." Alice Pemberton is the type of woman who persists in helping everybody around her to manage their affairs. With no thought of anything but kindness on her part and the perfection of the universe as the aim, she undermines every relationship. When her husband sees that Alice will bring catastrophe to her sister's family, and that she will remain blind to her part in it, he cuts the Gordian knot by putting poison in her chocolate malt.

The tale by the title "There Is No Conversation" struck me as best of all. It is about an ageing French aristocrat who tries to be kind to a very plain American woman visiting Paris. Unknown to him, she is in reality a railroad tycoon of very considerable power, and she thinks she is humoring an old scapegrace. The cross-purposes tighten up when she finds, after becoming fond of him, that all his wealth lies in a railroad she intends to ruin. When the climax comes, neither can understand what the other has done.

NOW synopses like these have a danger which I want to forefend at once. They suggest that the stories are far too schematized dramatically. But though there is that tendency in Miss West—and magazine publication must certainly have had a hand in the shaping of these examples—the characterizations and the finesse of the narrative soften that bare-boned effect.

Even, as in "The Salt of the Earth," when we see everything coming, when we catch the point of Alice's trait in two pages, we are held by the sheer, skillful changeringing on the theme. "There Is No Conversation" could be compressed into an anecdote, and yet Miss West delineates her American lady from the West and her French dilettante so tellingly that they take on a stature which would have bulwarked a full-length novel.

"Life Sentence" may end with a saccharine and unprepared-for fillip, and the leit motif of "The Abiding Vision" may seem to us to have been dragged in rather strenuously by the heels, but in each she gives us passage upon passage which bear no taint of wilfully palatable drama.

At worst, it must be admitted, these stories have that taint. But at best they show how well a given clear pattern can be adorned with ingenious crochet-work by an intensely individual, imaginative and virtuoso-like skill. You may say that Miss West knows how to butter bread for quick readers, so to speak. You must also, in all fairness, allow that her stories in "The Harsh Voice" are charged with a deliciously shrewd and sub-acid insight into the motives of her characters. Self-conscious she may be in her scalpel-play, but dull never.

No wonder that H. G. Wells, in his "Experiment in Autobiography," remarked that it was Miss Rebecca West who taught him to see.

Frostburg Seeks to Rid Town of Stray Dogs

Frostburg, Md., Feb. 4 (AP).—Police officials here have announced that officers shot and killed about 20 stray dogs during the month of January as their contribution to the town's campaign against rabies and mad dogs. The police department has asked the municipal authorities to hire a full-time dog-catcher.

Archibald Malmaison

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, son of the great Nathaniel Hawthorne, was born June 22, 1846, and died July 14, 1934, at the advanced age of 88. An undergraduate at Harvard in the sixties, he rowed on the crew, and was an athletic, powerfully built man. His career was marked by extraordinary vicissitudes, but he survived them all, and his eighty-fifth birthday was celebrated in California with speeches and letters from all over the United States.

• • • •

Unfortunately for his literary reputation, he survived not only all the tragic disasters of his life, but he came very near to surviving his literary reputation. Yet I can remember, in my youth, reading a good many of his stories; he was then a famous man of letters. While he never wrote an immortal masterpiece, I think my readers will be deeply impressed by one novel so full of horror that I have not been able to forget it for 50 years. I suppose that none of his books is obtainable except in public libraries and second-hand bookshops. I myself have not even seen a copy of this novel for nearly 50 years, and yet I have no difficulty in remembering the plot. The story is called and in the preface Julian Hawthorne said that no civilized man would be willing to live his life over again. I remember reading that passage as a boy, and wondering if that really could be true. Later when I read Benjamin Franklin's opinion, which was the opposite of Mr. Hawthorne's, I felt a little better.

• • • •

Archibald Malmaison is a tale of horror, where the hero's mind and personality change every seven years. For seven years he is an imbecile, good-natured, mentally worthless, with no remembrance whatever of the seven years preceding; although he steadily grows in normal fashion physically.

A handsome young man, in full possession of his wits, he carries off a beautiful young woman, places her in a secret chamber, concealed by a false mantelpiece; then he goes downstairs, telling her he will be back in a few minutes. As he descends, the seven years of imbecility come upon him—and the rest of the story is so unspeakably horrible that I leave it to your imagination; unless you wish to find the book and have the nerve to read it.

Is it possible that any of my readers remember this novel?

Swinging Jurist Move Is Opposed

Eastern Virginians Fight for Separate New Judge.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—Vigorous opposition today met reports of a move in Washington by western Virginia members of Congress to amend the Montague bill creating an additional judgeship in the Eastern District of Virginia to give the prospective judge jurisdiction in the Western Judicial Circuit also.

"I think the needs in the Eastern District alone more than justify the creation of a new judgeship," said Thomas B. Gay, chairman of the Richmond Bar Association. "I think the showing made before the House Judiciary Committee at the last Congress was overwhelming and convincing on this point.

"I am not acquainted with the needs of the Western District, but if there is need for another judge in that district, then by all means it should be handled through separate legislation calling for a new judge for that area. A floater judge will not relieve the situation in the Eastern District, for no man can be two places at once.

Talk Of Third Party Stirs Capital Ranks

Possibility For Realignment Grows As New Deal Works For Reconciliation.

By Elliott Thurston.

SIGNS of a third party movement are beginning to come to the surface. They have long been perceptible to the initiated, like Mr. Roosevelt. He and some of his advisers have indicated from time to time that the New Deal strategy was to find a middle ground between the extreme right and the extreme left. And so far the New Deal has displayed a remarkable agility in holding both ends togther, partly because neither extreme was sure which way the New Deal was drifting. Hence the frequent attempts to guess whether coming New Deal moves would be to the left or to the right. Hence, also, the complaints from both extremes.

Business men and bankers, among others, concluded that it was better to make the best of the New Deal than to risk getting something even more drastic. One heard and still hears, among conservatives, the surmise that by 1936 the conservatives may be found supporting Mr. Roosevelt against a left-winger running on a third party ticket. Extraordinary as this first sounded in some Republican ears, it is by no means fanciful—the less so now that the left-wingers are becoming more restive, more dissatisfied and disgruntled.

THAT is exactly what is happening. It is of more than passing significance that some of the so-tagged progressives and liberals, who once thought they saw their own reflection in the New Deal, are commencing to think that what they mistook for their own images are, in fact, the somewhat altered but still unmistakable delineations of moderate conservatives. There is much rebellious talk on Capitol Hill among the progressives and liberals.

They cite that the New Deal not only has failed to produce a recovery but that it has now stated its program, save for reform of holding companies, and that the program is far short of their own ideas. As long as the New Deal was rushing up new recovery and reform legislation in bewildering confusion, the left wingers could not tell when their pet measures might come along. They attached inflation riders to the farm bill. They exacted concessions on silver. Senator Norris thought his dream of public operation of utilities was to be realized. Various progressives who enthusiastically joined the New Deal, on explicit invitation, imagined that we were going to have political realignment—but Mr. Farley shattered their illusions on that score in the last campaign.

For one reason or another the progressives and liberals are deeply discontented. Mr. Norris openly assails the President for tolerating Farleyism, and is beginning to doubt whether TVA really spells the end of private utility operation. Mr. Cutting, who was once offered a New Deal portfolio, is permanently embittered. Mr. Nye is full of suspicions that the New Deal wants to head off his munitions inquiry. He and Mr. Borah long ago began firing at NRA. Hiram Johnson is still in line, though restless and still boiling over the World Court.

MR. WHEELER is more ardently than ever for 16-to-1 silver. The La Follettes are still courted, but wary and already driven into their own personally conducted third or Progressive Party in Wisconsin. The list is long and becomes impressive when it is remembered that within the leftist group are ambitious young men who shrewdly calculate the possibilities of uniting much, if not all, of the forces of left-wing discontent. If the present and potential followers of Huey Long, Dr. Townsend, Upton Sinclair, Father Coughlin, Gov. Floyd Bjerstjerne Olson of Minnesota, the La Follettes, and the numerous other Progressive and leftist leaders could be added together into a third party, it would be a most formidable movement.

Probably they can not be added up because they disagree among themselves. Nevertheless, an adept, adroit political leader might be able to find enough common ground to unite some of these leaders and the groups they represent. He might, for instance, start with free silver, throw in share-the-wealth ideas, soak-the-rich taxation, far more generous old-age pensions and unemployment and health insurance benefits than the New Deal proposes. He would toss in a central bank, the bonus, the 30-hour week, more cash for farmers, still more cash to pay off the victims of closed banks, to pay off farm and home mortgages. Public operation of utilities, if not of factories, would go into the platform. Indeed, there is almost no end of vote-catching material available for the left wing.

Not so for the right wing. They can only resist and point with alarm—never popular political wares. Now that the New Deal program is just about unfolded—now that the "worst is known," the stage is set for a third party which would go the New Deal at least one better all down the line. Recovery would blight the movement. Otherwise what passes for political logic leads aspiring politicians who are to the left of the New Deal to ponder the possibilities of fomenting and launching a new third party drive. It has been in the cards all along. It has now become almost too tempting to be resisted by certain hopefuls on the left who doubt that the New Deal has anything more up its sleeve, who have yet to detect anything much up the right-wing sleeve.

Mr. Roosevelt may be able to charm the malcontents back into his fold. Or recovery may nip them in the bud. At this moment they are developing all of the well-known symptoms of third-party presidentialitis.

Once Overs

Tropical Vacation.

The birdies are sweetly singing,
The flowers are ev'rywhere,
The golfers are wildly swinging,
The bathers are nearly bare;
I'm soothed by the weather mellow
And held by the tropic's grip—
And what do the clockers tip?)

II.

How restful it is to be here
Where nature is at her best!
How comforting all we see here!
And, oh, what a place to rest!
The colorful ocean stretches
Afar from the sands so warm—
(Hey! Where is that guy who fetches
That sheet called the Racing Form?)

III.

The breezes are perfume-laden,
There's peace in the tropic scene;
Each beautiful bathing maiden
Looks fit for the stage and screen;
I came here to dodge all worry,
I'm firm for a care-free stay—
(Boy, bring me that dopesheet! Hurry!
I might beat those nags today.)

IV.

The glory of trees in flower,
The spell of the Southern skies,
The comfort of ev'ry hour
Where beauty but rarely dies,
Here quiet is unabated—
There's nothing to make me fret—
(I wonder the way they're weighted
Which horse is today's best bet)?

V.

I'll just have a calm vacation,
With naught to disturb my mind,
Away with each aggravation!
I'll leave petty cares behind;
I need a good rest; I'm sickly;
Excitement just doesn't pay;
(Hey! Taxi! The race track, quickly!
I've got a good thing to play).

VI.

It's quiet and peace I'm needing,
Just that and the summer sun;
I'll catch up on all my reading,
All strain on my nerves I'll shun;
The doctor I must obey, sir;
His orders are final, quite;
So off to the nags today, sir,
And then to the dogs tonight!

Vanderbilt's Book Excites Interest Here

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Many members of Capital society were delightfully surprised yesterday when they received advance copies of the latest book by Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., "Farewell to Fifth Avenue; a valedictory to Old Millionaires." Mr. Vanderbilt, who has passed the last two winters in the Capital, has many friends here who are interested in him and his work.

Several weeks ago, without previous announcement, he married the former Helen Varner, of Clarksburg, W. Va., in New Mexico. They met in New Mexico about three years ago, and romantically decided to be married in the place of their meeting. They are now honeymooning at Mr. Vanderbilt's ranch in Nevada, although Mr. Vanderbilt will start soon on a lecture tour which will take him to many parts of the country.

The new book, a part of which was published in installments in a popular magazine, will not be released until next Monday, so little can be said about the contents of it, but a bit about the life and ramifications of the young author will be most interesting to those who do not know him.

Founded Chain of Papers.

In 1898, the year America formally saluted its imperial destiny, Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., was born. Although the son of a millionaire, he made up his mind early to study life in its various phases. He passed his examination for Yale and West Point, but attended neither. In 1917 he went to France to do his part in the World War, and in 1919 started to work. Perhaps it was unnecessary for the heir to the Vanderbilt millions to do either, but young "Neil" never wanted to be just another Vanderbilt heir.

Since 1919 he has been prominent as a writer and newspaper owner. In 1923 he started the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, which was the first tabloid in the West. His chain of newspapers expanded rapidly until the spring of 1927, when his journalistic activities came to an abrupt close.

Mr. Vanderbilt has written nine books; he has crossed the Atlantic 52 times, 44 of his crossings having been made before he was 16 years old; twice he has won the Astor Cup for yacht racing; he has lived in every country of Europe, in Mexico, Canada and in every corner of the United States, and he has motored over half a million miles, including 6,000 in Ceylon. He has sailed the coasts of Europe and America in everything from a knockabout to a cup defender. He has known earls and emperor, millionaires, prelates, paupers and presidents, and he has been in the headlines since the day of his birth.

Valedictory to an Epoch.

Now, at the age of 35, he is ready and well equipped to review a checkered past—not in terms of its glamor, but in terms of its real meaning. His new book is his goodbye to all that, his valedictory to an epoch which has definitely closed. No one but Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., could have written this book, a record, not merely sensational in its revelations, but significant of a profound change in the outlook of America's scions of wealth.

At 16, young Neil had dined with every crowned head in Europe, but had never been out unescorted. Now he has determined to set down, without fear or favor, the record of a way of life which America will never see again. If 640 Fifth avenue, the home of the author's parents, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, which is the last of those mighty mansions left standing, could talk, holding back nothing, it might utter the words that comprise this intensely fascinating and utterly frank book.

"Farewell to Fifth Avenue" may explode like a bombshell in the Fifth avenue and Newport camps, but it was not written for the sake of being sensational. The aim has been to catch the very forms and patterns of an extravagant era, to depict in the colors of truth the almost unbelievable way in which the masters of America lived before the "break up."

Imposing Cast of Characters.

The cast of characters included all the crowned heads of Europe, the Carnegies, the Mellons, the Morgans, the Whitneys, the Astors, the Bakers and, of course, the Vanderbilts; the Presidents of the United States from Theodore Roosevelt to Franklin D. Roosevelt; Hearst, Munsey and Brisbane, Mussolini, Hitler and Capone; the die-hards of Newport, society racketeers, fortune hunters, snobs and celebrities; the whole colorful parade of arrogant wealth which has now suddenly lost its glamor and much of its meaning.

And all in Washington who know Mr. Vanderbilt will be interested in reading the serious and thoughtful book in which he has attempted to explain, from the point of view of one who was produced by it, the real meaning of the period of the multimillionaires.

Supreme Court Wives Observe Days 'At Home'

Mrs. Hughes Follows the Custom of Receiving in Drawing Room.

(Associated Press.)

Gold clauses may stand or fall or kindred New Deal programs be at judicial crisis, but the wives of the Supreme Court serenely hold their "at homes."

They made their plans for Monday's "at home" before Chief Justice Hughes let the world know the court wouldn't announce its gold case decision yesterday.

Only stable factors in an ever-shifting official scene are the life-tenure justices and their wives. From Administration to Administration they carry on a social tradition conservative yet charming.

Receives in Drawing Room.

Some of the coziest cups of tea to be had in Washington go to those who call at Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes' "at homes." She follows the fashion of having her tea table in the drawing room where she receives, by a fireplace, where two long couches invite to sitting while sipping. That is a great luxury in a Capital which takes much of its sociability in such large numbers that tea must be sipped standing.

By holding to the tea table in the drawing room pattern, Mrs Hughes upheld the tradition of Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the former Chief Justice.

Mrs. Harlan F. Stone holdings to the drawing room "at homes," too, with the emphasis on the interest of the conversation.

Brandeises Invite Guests.

The Hughes, the Stones, the Roberts and the Butlers lend eclat to many social functions. Justice Van Devanter, recently widowed, is not appearing socially; Justice Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, once active now rarely appear; Justice Brandeis and Mrs. Brandeis are seldom seen abroad.

But the Brandeises have an interesting social life in their own home. Guests from all over the country come on invitation to their Sunday afternoons—usually guests with some notable interest or achievement.

Earlier in the afternoon Princess Boncompagni was entertained at tea at the White House.

Another interesting tea yesterday was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja at their home in Georgetown. The ranking guests were the new Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefeld. Miss Exilona Hamilton, a visitor from New York, and her fiance, Mr. Arthur Mullen, were also among the guests.

Frances Lorenz Becomes Bride Of Mr. Hoffman

Rev. T. G. Smyth Officiates at Ceremony Held in Chevy Chase Home.

The ceremony was performed in the living room at 8 o'clock by the Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament.

The arrangements were charming in detail, with palms, ferns and baskets of early spring flowers and roses banked in front of the huge fireplace, which formed an improvised altar.

Frances Glenn Sings.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Mary Frances Glenn sang, accompanied by Mrs. Dorothy M. Farrior. The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, Mr. Eugene H. Lorenz, who gave her in marriage. She wore a white satin gown made on empress lines, with lace bodice, and full lace sleeves with white satin cuffs to the elbow, and forming points over the hands. The gown had a long, oval-shaped train and the long veil of Brussels lace was arranged simply in a cap with a halo effect and caught at the neck line with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. George H. Hoffman, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Reception Follows Ceremony.

A reception followed the ceremony when the couple was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Lorenz. She wore a gown of aquamarine lace, made princess style, with a shoulder bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Others in the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lorenz, Mrs. Frank M. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hoffman.

They will also spend a short time visiting some of Mrs. Osgood's relatives in Richmond, Va. They attended Mrs. Roosevelt's tea at the White House yesterday with Princess Boncompagni, cousin of Mr. Osgood.

Miss Frances Osgood, their daughter, is attending school in Boston, and will make her debut next season. For the last three years, she was at Foxcroft School in Virginia.

Flower Making Vogue Popular In Washington

Strange Paraphernalia Is Turned Into Beautiful Reproductions.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE SHOPPER'S beaten trail seldom leads her past the interesting little flower-making shop located on the eighth floor of an F street building.

Here one may purchase all the variety of materials it takes to make a gardenia corsage or a field flower bouquet. And here you are given free instructions on how to turn wisps of wood pulp, small green rubber cords and other strange paraphernalia into a rare thing of beauty.

It's an extremely interesting place to visit. You're apt to see one industrious person busy with a bunch of violets and another completing a bunch of dainty sweetheart roses. Or another artisan may be working on a large cluster of magnolias.

There are many corsages, bouquets and other examples of flower handiwork on display. They are so artistically planned and adeptly made you'll find it hard to believe at first glance that they aren't real.

The vogue for this flower-making started several years ago in California and since then has spread rapidly over the whole continent. Here in Washington it has a large following. At the same time there are hundreds of women who are interested but do not know where to obtain materials and instructions.

Many of the "students" not only pay for their materials but even realize a profit on the sales of their work. It costs comparatively little to make a dainty bouquet, certainly several times less than to buy one.

New Three-in-One Cream.

An English manufacturer of cosmetics has been in the business so long that even our grandmothers were brought up on his delicate powders and perfumes. Now he meets the spirit of the modern age with a delightful complexion cream which serves three purposes in one. His idea evidently is that women are so often hurrying from here to yon that they will not take time to use two or three creams. Therefore, he gives them one which cleanses, nourishes and acts as a powder base.

It comes in an attractive ivory container that can be used afterward as a catch-me-all for your dressing table. The price is conservative.

Fatigue Blamed on Heavy Coats.

A large percentage of women come home from a day's shopping "worn to a frazzle." They think that walking from store to store, waiting to be waited on, and pushing through the crowds is largely responsible for their fatigue. Undoubtedly these factors contribute their share but in many cases the shopper has worn a heavy coat and is exhausted from carrying this burden around.

Every shopper should have a street coat, one that is warm but light. A local store is featuring some this week. They are in two types. One, priced at $18.95, is made from a Scottish tweed which comes in heather mixtures and plaids. This is in the Balmaacan style.

The other, a genuine Harris tweed, is $25. This, hand loomed, of course, comes from an island off the coast of Scotland.

Both coats are available in sizes from 12 to 20.

Valentine's Day Shopping.

While there still are almost two weeks until valentine's day, remember that if there are friends who live some distance away you should do your shopping early.

One downtown store suggests some perfume dolls which come on a big red heart. The dolls are in gold or silver finish and have a little inner compartment for a mite of perfume.

You may wear these pinned at the neck of your frock as a brooch, or hanging from a chain or ribbon around your neck. Besides being attractive and unique valentine remembrances, they also are beautifully adapted to a slender budget, as they cost only 50 cents.

Balbriggans for 79 Cents.

Down, down they come in price but up in our estimation. That's the balbriggans selling now for 79 cents. In their delicate pastel tints they're quite irresistible. Wear one on a frigid night and you'll agree they've as much wear-apparel as eye-appeal.

One joy about these balbriggans is the fact that they take to water like a duck. You can wash them, scrub them and they still remain as serviceable as the day they were bought.

Those displayed at a downtown store come in rose, tea rose, blue and pink, and sizes small, medium and large. Remember in buying yours, the tighter they fit the warmer they are. And even though they cling like paper on the wall they'll "give" enough to be completely comfortable.

Radiator Dryers Big Help.

The young woman who wishes to keep down her laundry bill by doing a bit of her own washing will find the radiator dryers a big help.

These are light wire frames that fasten onto the radiator. Several branches spread out over it and you hang your hose and lingerie on these. In a short while the heat from the radiator has dried them. Price, 39 cents.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a daily reader of your column which I find very helpful to those who write you for advice. I am writing in the hope you will be able to advise me. I am a married woman, 28 years old. I have a little son 5 years old and am employed.

* * * *

Now, Miss Haworth, I haven't been fortunate enough to get an education. When I was 14 years old I had to leave school to work for a living. I was then only in the sixth grade. Having been ill most of my childhood, I lost a lot of time from school the few years I went. And, in my opinion, I didn't know enough even to be in the sixth grade.

* * * *

I have always been desirous of learning. I went to night school for a while quite a few years back but found the study there too far advanced for me. I have lost many opportunities due to my lack of schooling. Isn't there some school in Washington where I could go and be taught from where I left off? I can't afford to pay tuition at a private school as I have myself and my child to support.

* * * *

I will never be satisfied to stay as I am. I want to make something of myself. I work alternated hours which makes it hard for me to attend high school classes, so if you can suggest a school where I could go I would be very grateful to you. I shall be waiting for your answer. Gratefully yours,

UNEDUCATED.

Talk to Miss Backus.

DEAR UNEDUCATED: I want you to talk with Miss Bertie Backus, assitant superintendent of Washington's public schools. You will find her at the Franklin School, Thirteenth and K streets northwest. Make an appointment with her by telephoning National 6000 and asking to be connected with Miss Backus at the Franklin School. I have spoken to her about your problem and she is expecting you to call.

* * * *

Miss Backus, in my opinion, is the ideal person to help you in solving your problem. She is a great educator, who has attracted national attention with her work in the character education project carried on in connection with the District of Columbia's public school system. Moreover, she is personally interested in aiding the development of persons in your situation. I believe she can work out for you a practicable program of study. But if there is anything further I can do, please let me know.

* * * *

Incidentally, I wish to say you write a remarkably well-phrased letter for one who has been denied the advantages of formal education past the sixth grade. With your present equipment and your hunger for self-improvement, you should make great progress in your proposed studies. M. H.

Cheap Dessert Answer Found In Dried Fruit

By Dorothea Duncan.

DRIED FRUITS are important to the woman who plans her menus on a limited budget. Here is one source of fruit that is inexpensive. It may be served occasionally for breakfast, but because the sugar in dried fruit is more concentrated than in fresh fruit, it is sweeter and more desirable as a dessert than as a frequent breakfast dish.

The following question has been submitted by a reader: Could you give me several recipes for the use of dried fruits to be served as dessert?

This dried apple cake may be served with a simple white frosting as cake or with lemon sauce as a pudding.

Dried Apple Cake.

2 cups dried apples, 2 cups molasses, 1 cup shortening, 1 cup sour milk.

2 eggs, 4 cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons soda, spices as desired.

Stew the apples just enough so that they will chop easily, and cut them into pieces as large as raisins. Boil them in molasses until they are as thick as preserves, then drain off the molasses. Be careful that fire is not too hot under molasses as it may burn. Stir molasses, shortening, sour milk and eggs together, add flour, soda and spices which have been sifted together, and last of all the apples. This makes two loaves. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees-375 degrees Fahrenheit, 45-60 minutes).

Crisscross Apricot Pie.

1½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups dried apricots, cooked and drained
½ cup crushed pineapple, drained
1-3 cup sugar
1 cup hot apricot juice
½ cup pineapple juice
1 recipe pie crust

Combine tapioca, sugar and salt. Add apricots and juice and let stand 15 minutes, or while pastry is being made. Line a 9-inch pie tin with pastry, rolled to ⅛-inch thickness. Add pineapple and pineapple juice to apricot mixture and turn into pie shell. Arrange lattice of pastry strips across top. Moisten edge of pie with cold water and finish with a narrow strip of pastry. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) 10 minutes; then decrease heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake 30 minutes longer. Cool. Serve with or without sweetened whipped cream.

Other questions follow:

Do you know of any simple, inexpensive favor that I can make at home that will be appropriate for a Valentine party table?

Old-Fashioned Bouquets.

Old-fashioned bouquets are decorative as well as inexpensive and they require but a few minutes to make. Buy small round varicolored gumdrops. Wire about eight of these together with very fine milliner's wire, or the kind that was used in making organdy flowers a few seasons ago. Use the lighter pastel colors for the flowers and green ones for the leaves. Place a small paper lace doilie back of the candy flowers. Tie the whole bouquet with bit of narrow ribbon. The final effect will be that of an old-fashioned nosegay. One of these may be placed at each place with a card bearing the guest's name, and will serve as a favor as well as a place card.

What is "hoe cake?"

Hoe cake was originally a plain cake, either of cornmeal or wheat flour, so named because the old-time plantation "mammy" often cooked it on the broad blade of a cotton-hoe set over hot embers in front of a wood fire. The term is now applied also, and chiefly, to a richer "biscuit bread" of wheat flour baked either on a griddle or in an oven, and popular in Southern households for eating with a glass of milk or cream and as an accompaniment to fruit compotes.

Visitors From Norway and Italy Impressed by Independence of American Women; Barnard Club Fetes Exchange Students.

AFTER STRUGGLING for several months to adjust themselves to life in New York, a couple of European students came to Washington for the week-end and immediately felt right at home.

"Washington, why it is like a European city," Elisabeth Kallevig, of Oslo, Norway, exclaimed yesterday as she and her companion, Giuditta Cecchi, of Rome, took a few minutes out from monument gazing and other forms of sightseeing.

"It is your many parks, trees and circles and beautiful buildings that make it seem homelike, I think," said dark-eyed Miss Cecchi. "In New York everything is straight up and down. Here it is spread out. That is the kind of a city we are used to."

Both girls are exchange students at Barnard College, and, while in the Capital, were guests of honor at a tea given by the Washington Barnard College Club.

Impressed by Women's Freedom.

Since their arrival in the United States last September, they believe they have gained a rather comprehensive picture of American life. They are fascinated with the independence and active life of American women.

"Here the women do everything," Miss Cecchi marveled. "You have women teachers, doctors, lawyers, everything. Well, we might have women lawyers, too, but they would starve to death. Nobody would go to them."

Even women teachers are rare in her country, Miss Cecchi said. At Barnard she is studying English and fine arts. When she returns to Rome in June she will continue her education for several years and then—

"And then," Miss Cecchi said, "I don't know what I shall do. Try to get on the staff of a magazine or go into a library or museum, I suppose. There are not many jobs in my country."

Miss Kallevig thinks she may teach. Her course at Barnard is built around American history and government. Yesterday she and her companion went to the Hill to watch the workings of American Government at close range.

Both girls considered gravely every question about their impressions of America and things American; every question, that is, except one dealing with young men in this country. That brought forth an exchange of self-conscious glances.

Finally Miss Cecchi said:

"American men are nice. They are polite. But they are less sentimental and romantic than the men of Italy."

This comparison surprised Miss Kallevig.

"Oh, but I have found American men exceedingly romantic and sentimental, much more so than Norwegians," she said and then, at an amused look from the Italian, she flushed.

"Your houses, now they are really wonderful," she said. "Gadgets everywhere and so many labor-saving devices. But we have nice houses in Oslo, too. Not so modern as yours, of course, but still they are nice. When I first came to America some one asked me how Norwegians lived. And I said, 'Oh, they live in snow huts.' But I was only teasing."

Likes Apartments in U. S.

"It's your apartments I like," Miss Cecchi observed. "If I were to live in America I should certainly want an apartment in a big, fine building."

Both the attractive young foreigners are delighted with American clothes, American sports, American movies. They had a grand time at football games last fall although they were horrified at the roughness of the players.

"In Italy we play football but it is against the rules to do anything but kick the ball," Miss Cecchi explained. "Here everybody gets down on the ground and fights with everybody else. We would never call it football."

How To KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Raynaud's Disease.

UNDER the title, "Local Asphyxia" (lack of blood), Maurice Raynaud, a French physician, published in 1862 a description of a disease now known by his name. He described a condition affecting the parts of the body that are likely to be influenced by exposure to cold. The disease appears symmetrically, affecting both hands or both feet at the same time, and occasionally both sides of the nose or both ears. In the early stage a typical attack is characterized by an intermittent or spasmodic shutting off of the circulation of the part affected.

If spasm of the arteries continues the skin vessels contract and the fingers may become completely blanched. Numbness of the fingers is a still later manifestation and is a result of the loss of circulation similar to that which occurs when the hand or arm "goes to sleep." These are usually the first symptoms noticed by the patient.

When the spasm of the arteries begins to relax blood again flows in the vessels and the hand takes on a bluish, mottled appearance which gradually turns to a bright red. These color changes may alternate every few minutes. Whenever the anemic stage is prolonged blisters, ulcers, and superficial gangrene may occur. Sometimes the resulting ulcers are slow in healing and leave white scars.

Since over 90 per cent of those affected are women of the anemic, overworked, undernourished type, treatment consists in building the body reserve, reducing the number of hours of work, and adding more hours of rest. By some authors colitis is said to be a factor and if it exists attention should be given to eliminating this condition. Physicians have found that a proper form of arsenic given into the veins at least once each week is helpful. The cutting of certain nerve roots near the lower spine has been followed by permanent control of symptoms, but this procedure is not advised except in extreme cases.

What TODAY Means

"Aquarius."

IF FEBRUARY 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

If you are wise you will refrain from being abrupt in your manner of speech today, for enmity may result from any form of rudeness. It will pay to be tolerant of other people's opinion. It will also be good judgment not to flatly contradict a friend or relative, if they make a positive statement regarding a matter you may know very little about.

Be discriminating in matters involving good taste or judgment, especially if friends may be in a position to comment on your decision later on! Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in trying to win a heart, will be wise to steer clear of any complicated situations today which might stir up discord.

If a woman, and February 5 is your birthday, you will display good judgment if you never allow social aspirations to cause you to neglect or snub old friends. There is a strong possibility of your attaining great popularity, providing you do not allow social success to go to your head. Through inheritance or marriage you may find yourself some day in an enviable position and the amount of happiness you will have may depend largely on how wisely you administer your financial affairs.

In the meantime, if seeking a vocational line of activity, teaching, journalism, art, secretarial work, or some branch of selling should satisfactorily solve your financial problem. If in selecting a mate your brains, as well as your heart, are influencing factors, the results should be all you could desire.

If a man, and February 5 is your natal day, avoid the error of depending on the judgment or actions of others to advance your personal interests. Theology, law, engineering, as well as industrial and manufacturing lines, offer good chances for profitable employment.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

IN MODERN educational methods, first-hand experience supplements book learning. The plan stimulates interest and gives the children a better grasp of the subject in hand than they can gain from the printed page alone.

Mothers can adopt these same methods to advantage. How many of the commercial and manufacturing plants in your city have you explored? The children will be interested in visiting a laundry, a dairy, a canning company, a bakery and a dozen similar plants. They can't help but gain in knowledge of how things work from such trips, and most modern business houses welcome visitors.

If you do take the children on any such tour, however, impress them with the fact that, as guests of the plant, they must not make nuisances of themselves. Questions are all right—there is usually a guide to answer them, but they must not stick their fingers in the machinery or get in the way. This warning is prompted by the memory of the 8-year-old who, visiting the mechanical department of a newspaper plant, threw himself on the floor and screamed because he was not permitted to stick his finger in a pot of boiling metal to see if it was hot!

Go along with them to see that they behave properly; encourage them to ask questions; call their attention to details that have some application to their daily life, and the visit is bound to be profitable.

Police Probe 'Confession' Of Legenza

Slayer Sought to Clear Marie McKeever in Gun Smuggling.

By William T. Christian
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4.—While the body of Walter Legenza remained at a local undertaking establishment awaiting burial, Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon, Department of Justice officials and other authorities today questioned the truth of his eleventh-hour "confession," made on the eve of his electrocution at the State penitentiary, in which the condemned gangster sought to exonerate Marie McKeever of complicity in the Richmond jail break by placing the blame on W. C. Duke, an elderly guard at the jail, and Harry Johnston, a prisoner who was confined in the same cell tier with Legenza and his pal, Robert Mais, when they shot their way out of jail September 29.

Meanwhile, M. Haley Shelton, who acted as legal adviser to the gangster after they were returned to Richmond to be resentenced and electrocuted, was revealed today as the "friend" who was requested by Legenza to arrange for the burial of his body.

The arrangements for burial were discussed by Legenza during a conference with his attorney last Friday—the day before he followed his confederate, Mais, to the death chair to pay the penalty exacted by the State for his crimes.

Will Be Buried Today.

The gangster's body will be taken to Orchid, a hamlet in Louisa County, for burial tomorrow afternoon, Shelton said. It will be laid to rest in a cemetery plot owned by Shelton.

In an oral statement said to have been made by Legenza to Mr. Shelton, the killer was quoted as saying that W. C. Duke was paid $200 to smuggle two pistols to Johnston, who passed them to the gangsters.

Duke committed suicide at the jail on the eve of a grand jury investigation of the jail break and Johnston is now serving a one-year sentence at the State penitentiary for breaking into a boxcar. At the time of Duke's suicide, friends attributed his act to ill health and worry over the escape of the gangsters.

Commonwealth's Attorney Haddon declared today he is convinced Duke was not involved in any way in the jail break. He ridiculed the suggestion that the jail guard had accepted a bribe to deliver to the gangsters the two guns with which they blazed their way to freedom.

Confidence in Duke.

While affirming his implicit confidence in Duke's innocence, the Commonwealth's attorney said he intended to question Johnston late today or tomorrow in an effort to clear up the mystery of how the guns were smuggled into the gangsters' cell at the jail.

The suspicion cast on Duke's trustworthiness by Legenza's purported confession was brushed aside by city officials who, because of their long acquaintance with the jail guard, refused to believe that he accepted a bribe from the gangsters.

Circumstances point to his innocence, they declared, calling attention to the fact that he was not likely to have been so foolish as to risk exposure by using Johnston or any other prisoner as an intermediary in passing the guns. If he had smuggled the pistols into the jail, it was said, he would have been more likely to have given them directly to Mais and Legenza. Mr. Haddon said that he and Sergt. Wiltshire, special investigator, questioned every prisoner confined in the cell with Mais and Legenza at the time of the jail break, and obtained written statements from them. At that time all denied having any knowledge of how the guns were passed into the cell.

Deny Legenza's Charge.

Department of Justice officials heatedly denied Legenza's statement, as quoted by Shelton, that his confession of complicity in the kidnaping and murder of William Weiss, wealthy Philadelphian night club operator, was wrung from him by Department of Justice agents who tortured him by twisting his ears and toes and beating him across the throat.

Legenza's statement that he was beaten until he became unconscious was not supported by Dr. Herbert Mann, physician at the State Penitentiary, who examined Leganza's broken leg and crushed heels after he was lodged in the death house. The gangster's leg and heels were fractured when he jumped from a railroad embankment in Philadelphia while fleeing from police officers.

It is not customary to make a detailed physical examination of condemned prisoners when they are admitted to the penitentiary, Dr. Mann said. However, the physician saw both Mais and Legenza several times after they were placed in the death cell. He observed no bruises on Legenza's throat or body, he said.

On Mais' body, he added, there were "one or two bruises." Spectators who saw Mais when he was brought into Hustings Court to be re-sentenced four days after the capture of the gangsters in New York reported that the back of his neck was an angry scarlet, as if he had been beaten with a broad strap, and that his face was bruised and swollen.

GOV. HARRY W. NICE, of Maryland, who is reported as having the State's biennial budget completed and ready for submission to the State Legislature when it reconvenes tonight.

Nice to Present Budget Tonight With Message

Conflicting Programs for Emergency Revenue Faces Legislature.

Annapolis, Md., Feb 4 (AP).—When the Legislature convenes tomorrow night for the sixth week of the session the members will face conflicting programs designed to raise emergency revenue for the State. They also will receive the kingpin piece of legislation of the session—the biennial budget.

Gov. Harry W. Nice will present his budget, covering the regular expenses of the State for the fiscal years 1936-1937. He will have the bill presented in both houses and will deliver a budget message in person from the rostrum of the House of Delegates at a joint session of the House and Senate.

For several weeks the House ways and means and the Senate finance committee have had before them the Governor's request for a total of $30,629,000 in emergency revenue, covering relief, old-age pensions, administration of unemployment insurance, care of insane, current treasury needs and rehabilitation of oyster beds. With these are suggested revenue bills.

The Legislature will receive the report of the Governor's advisory committee on revenue sources, headed by William J. Casey, which recommends the raising of $16,000,000, $8,000,000 for the current treasury funds and relief by bond issue, and $8,000,000 for social and other purposes in 1936-1937. Recommended diversion of State roads commission funds to carry the bond issue in place of additional taxation has already produced rumblings.

The Democratic leadership has in process of enactment bills to enable that State to sell the Northern Central $90,000 annuity, and levying a beer tax to meet the expected $2,229,000 deficit in the treasury by September 20, and to provide $1,500,000 in treasury working reserves.

This plan conflicts with the Casey committee plan to meet current fiscal needs and the Governor's bills also covering the same ground.

Differences in amounts set by the Casey committee and the Governor are based on different ideas as to how much aid the Federal Government will give the State in financing relief and other social legislation.

State Trims Power Rates Half Million

West Virginia Slashes Costs to 90 Per Cent of Consumers.

Public Service Board Aids Users of Small Quantities.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 4 (Spl.). Consumers of electricity in all parts of West Virginia received a substantial reduction in rates in an order handed down today by the State public service commission.

The order applies to all consumers of electricity supplied by the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Co., the Appalachian Electric Power Co., the Wheeling Electric Co. and the Spencer Water & Ice Co., comprising approximately 90 per cent of the domestic electric consumers in the State. The West Penn operates in 30 northern counties and the Appalachian in 22 southern counties.

"The total reductions to the users of electric service for residential and commercial services," the commission stated, "are estimated at $487,300 annually, and provisions are made whereby municipalities may effect a total savings of approximately $50,000 in street lighting bills.

"The rates are designed to benefit principally residential customers using small quantities of energy. For example, the rate of the Monongahela West Penn for residential service for the first 25 kilowatt hours is reduced from 8 cents to 6½ cents net throughout its northern territory, and 7 cents net in its southern territory, and the customer charge of the Appalachian and the Wheeling Electric has been reduced from 50 cents to 30 cents with a further monthly reduction, until February, 1936, when this charge will be reduced to 15 cents."

The annual reductions will be well in excess of a half-million dollars.

The reductions are effective March 1, the commission stated, and are made "with the consent of the utilities affected," pending final investigation of rates throughout the State now being made.

Utility Plans Court Plea On Order to Cut Rates

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—Reports were current today that officials of the Maryland Public Service Commission and officers of the Potomac Edison Co. may confer again in an attempt to iron out differences in the $325,000 reduction in gross income ordered for the company by the commission.

The company's lawyers declined to see newspapermen, and the commission said it has nothing definite to report.

It also was stated in well informed circles that the utility company plans entering an appeal from the commission's order probably on Wednesday in the Baltimore Circuit Court. It is expected that court action will be deferred in the event a conference date is set.

Wants Reduction Spread.

The principal cause of friction was said to be the electric company's insistence that approximately one-third of the total reduction be given its subsidiaries serving other States. The commission contends that since only about 18 per cent of the company's income is from these subsidiaries, it can not rightfully give them 33 per cent of the cut. The greater part of the rate cut, the commission insists, must go to Maryland customers, although it does not deny that a proportionate amount may go to out-of-State subsidiaries.

Rate Schedules Rejected.

Two schedules of rates submitted by Potomac Edison have been rejected by the commission on these grounds. The commission now is preparing its own schedule of rates to impose on the company in event no satisfactory arrangement is made.

Potomac Edison serves counties in western Maryland and sections of Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The recent reduction was ordered by the Public Service Commission after two years of litigation on the company's valuation.

Blue Ridge V.F.W. Post Regains Its Charter

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—Blue Ridge Post, No. 484, Veterans of Foreign Wars, which had its charter taken away from it last fall, has been reorganized here with M. S. Thomas as the temporary commander.

When the charter was withdrawn, the post claimed the largest membership of any V. F. W. post in Virginia. With reorganization, the post will work for the establishment here of the office of department service officer, in view of the fact that the regional office of the Veterans' Administration has been moved from Richmond to Roanoke. Permanent organization plans are expected to be completed at a meeting Wednesday night.

Cattle to Be Tested.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 4 (Spl.). Thirty-six herds, a total of 607 head of cattle, have been signed in Berkeley County for Bang's disease testing, said County Agent McClung, while many other farmers have called to express their intention of signing up as soon as they can get in to the office.

Addresses Moose Lodge.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 4 (Spl.). Frederick N. Zihlman, of Washington, supreme past dictator, Loyal Order of Moose, was the principal speaker at a special meeting of Carroll County Lodge, No. 1381, held here Saturday night.

Sale of Marihuana to Children Of Baltimore Schools Reported

Nothing in Federal Laws to Prevent Vending of Powerful Mexican Drug, Narcotic Bureau Head Says; Parents Plan Action.

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—The sale of marihuana, a powerful habit-forming Mexican drug, to high school boys and girls here in cigarettes was reported today from two sources.

Boyd H. Martin, supervisor here for the Federal Narcotics Bureau, said the drug, produced from a Mexican weed, was being sold extensively in Baltimore, but there was nothing in the Federal laws to permit him to interfere.

An investigating committee of the Maryland Federation of Republican Women meanwhile reported it was informed marihuana-treated cigarettes were being sold in the neighborhood of one of the high schools and a number of girls had become addicted to the weed as a result.

Terming such conditions "outrageous," Mrs. Arthur B. Bibbins, chairman of the committee, said the committee felt its inquiry would be a difficult one but that when "parents of the afflicted children learn of conditions in the schools we may get some accurate information.

"In that case we certainly will turn the findings of our probe over to the Department of Justice for action."

Martin said the drug was not outlawed under the narcotics laws, but a suggestion was made from the women's committee that action might be taken against its sellers under the pure food act.

A bill has been introduced in the Maryland Legislature to create a State anti-narcotics law which would cover the sale of marihuana or any other habit-forming concoction.

Wife-Shooting Case Deferred

Whiteside to Face Court March 1; Victim in Critical Condition.

Another warrant for Whiteside charging him with theft of automobile license tags appeared in the police court, and a hearing on this charge also was continued until March 1.

Mrs. Whiteside was shot by her husband Saturday night as she played for pupils in a popular Richmond dance studio.

Her condition today was described as critical by attaches at the hospital.

Whiteside, who had recently returned from California, had asked her to leave with him, and shot her when she refused, Marshall Rotella and Miss J. S. Traylor, witnesses, said.

13 Arrested by Police In Drive on Numbers

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 4 (AP).—An alleged "numbers" ring, operating here and in Chambersburg is believed to have been broken up by the arrest in the latter city of 13 persons charged with operating the "racket."

Three white men and 10 colored men and women are being held under $300 bond as a result of week-end raids. The headquarters of the ring was here, it was said, and tickets and money were exchanged between the two cities by bus.

Plane Ignites, Hangar Burns

Easton, Md., Feb. 4 (AP).—Fire starting from an electric heater used to warm up a plane today destroyed the 200-foot hangar and three planes of the Chesapeake Air Ferries here and severely burned Christy McConnell, a mechanic.

McConnell's home nearby also was damaged by the blaze, which did a total damage estimated at $10,000. One small plane was saved, but in wheeling it out, McConnell was badly burned on the face and hands.

The mechanic was warming up a plane for Malcolm Hathaway, president of the airline, to make a trip to Washington. He said he stepped out of the hangar a few minutes and when he returned the plane was a mass of flames.

The blaze, fanned by a strong wind, spread quickly. Firemen also were handicapped by difficulty in obtaining water and were unable to save the property.

The company operated a daily plane service between the Eastern Shore and Baltimore, but it suspended service some time ago because of the unfavorable weather.

Loss from the fire was estimated at approximately $2,500 each for the three planes, $2,000 for the hangar and $500 for supplies and equipment.

Annie Sought

Baltimore Seeks 'Cat-Eye' on Jewel Theft Count.

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—State's Attorney J. Bernard J. Wells late today announced he will seek to have Lillian "Cat-Eye Annie" McDowell brought here from New York to face 12-year-old charges of stealing $20,000 worth of jewelry.

Wells earlier in the day had indicated Maryland would not attempt to gain custody of the woman but changed his mind, he said, when he found witnesses in the case were available and New York officials were willing to deliver the woman to Maryland authorities. Work of preparing extradition papers has begun.

"Cat-Eye Annie," now aged and stooped, recently was released after serving a 10-year term in a New York prison, but was rearrested on the charge of stealing jewelry from the home of Nathan F. Kaufman here in 1923 while posing as a servant.

In Gettysburg Tradition

Unselfish Scout Pins Star Badge, Received From Roosevelt, on David Thomas, Victim of Sledding Accident.

Gettysburg, Pa., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—"I have a Boy Scout star badge that I received from President Roosevelt. Dave always wanted a star badge and I want him to have mine."

Simple words simply spoken, yet they accompanied one of the most unselfish deeds ever done in historic Gettysburg.

Recently a Boy Scout, David Thomas, was killed in a sledding accident. The entire community was touched by the tragedy, but it was more deeply moved a few days later when John Caskey, a pal of the dead youth, appeared at the Thomas home and made his simple statement.

The grief-stricken mother, touched by his unselfishness, accepted the coveted medal and asked the donor to pin the star badge on her dead son's breast. Thus was the posthumous decoration conferred upon David Thomas.

The Boy Scout badge was a prized possession of the Caskey boy because it had been presented to him by President Roosevelt at a ceremony last winter. Young Thomas had earned his star badge also and attempted to go to Washington to receive his award, but was forced to turn back on account of a severe snowstorm.

Other plans were made for the awarding of the medals to the unfortunate ones who could not attend the Washington ceremony. Again it was impossible for David to receive his pin.

The unselfish decorator, when approached by his scoutmaster about his noble deed, said:

"I don't want any fuss about this, Mr. Beachem. It wasn't much of anything. Dave wanted a star badge and I wanted him to have one before he was buried."

Case Delayed Pending Quiz Of Gangsters

Macon Chief Due Soon to Question 7 Seized in Richmond.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—Richmond police started anew tonight on investigations of the pasts of four men and three women arrested here over the week-end in raids which netted burglar tools and enough explosives "to blow up the city," they said.

The police themselves asked for a 10-day continuance of the case in police court and it was granted.

Lieut. Dan Duling, who headed the detective squad which rounded up the band in an apartment and downtown hotel, indicated Richmond authorities were seeking to link at least part of the group with recent robberies in Georgia, where two of the defendants, James Aubrey Smith and John Leland, of Macon, Ga., were pardoned less than a year ago while serving life terms.

Explosive Possession Charged.

Charges of possessing the explosives and burglar tools were lodged against Smith and Harvey, John Randall, of Ashland, Ala., and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Twyman, of Richmond. With them are being held two women, identified by police as Lois Reid, 21, and Elsie McCall, 28, of Macon, charged with statutory offenses.

When they appeared in court today, Mrs. Twyman carried a 6-week-old infant, who was brought from the jail cell with her.

Replying that the police and State were not, Lieut. Duling, who during the prohibition days headed the Richmond "purity" squad, asked for a ten-day continuance.

"February 15," said Justice Folkes. "Take them back to jail."

Diamond Ring Found.

Searching their premises after a telephone conversation with Detective Chief Garrett of Macon, Richmond police found an unusual diamond ring which they declared resembled the description of one stolen in the robbery of the Southern Bell Telephone Co. in Macon.

Other tips and clews have come into the hands of the Richmond authorities since the arrest of the crowd late Saturday. One of the latest queries came today from Maryland authorities seeking information in an investigation of the murder of a newspaper route carrier. Richmond authorities supplied the information, but said hey doubted if the group here was connected with the Maryland case.

Thus far, no Georgia authorities have communicated with the State executive offices here through which all extradition proceedings must clear.

Boundary Commission Receives $4,000 More

The District-Virginia Boundary Commission, which is still trying to settle the 100-year-old controversy over Washington's southern boundary, was given an additional $4,000 yesterday in the urgent supplemental appropriations bill sent by Congress to the White House.

House conferees recommended concurrence in the Senate amendment when the bill was given final approval yesterday.

Bills have been introduced in both the Senate and the House to prolong the life of the commission another year and to appropriate $10,000 for its maintenance. The life of the commission expires late in March.

Ramsey Tells Student Body About Soviets

Living Standard 'Lowest in Europe,' Maryland College Informed.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—Addressing the student body of Western Maryland College this morning, E. C. Ramsey, of Baltimore, newspaper representative who has spent the last 15 years in Europe, spoke on the political situation in Russia.

Mr. Ramsey said that "out of Russia the magician of time may produce most anything," but he termed the present standard of living there "the lowest in Europe."

He said that while Russia is a "country of contradictions with the building of scientific and research institutes on one hand, while some of the greatest thinking citizens were being banished on the other," his impression was that the "leaders are really trying to reach a solution of human problems."

Referring to the Russian system of public voting, he declared that "if balloting were secret in Russia, and the people could vote without fear, the Communist Party would not be returned to power."

Mr. Ramsey held that while the general impression was that Russia was controlled by the All-Union Communist Congress, the actual power was centered in the ten members composing the political bureau of the Communist Party.

After picturing its educational system as being principally propaganda aimed at capitalism, Mr. Ramsey said the opinion is that "Russia will emerge as one of the most potent forces in Europe, not as a communistic state, but rather as a socialized democracy."

Legion Asks Unit to War On Criminal

Members Offer Aid to Authorities in Time of Emergencies.

Virginia Groups Set to Form 'Vigilante' Organization.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—Use of American Legionnaires in aiding law enforcement officers in emergencies was proposed here today.

The proposal was made by William W. Ackerly, Rockbridge County Commonwealth's attorney, who has been placed in charge of such a program in Virginia by Department Commander Robert Insco.

Suggesting organization by the legion in Virginia of a "law and order committee" which would promote greater respect for authority and prepare the legionnaires to assist the authorities in times of emergencies, Ackerly said each post in the State would organize all or part of its members into separate groups, with the approval and cooperation of local authorities.

The groups would be strategically located, particularly with reference to roads and highways leading out of the areas to be serviced or patrolled when necessary.

Sees Setback to Crime.

Such a set-up, Ackerly said, would discourage criminals by making it more difficult for them to evade law enforcement authorities and would constitute a strong, readily mobile and efficient force to bolster the strength of police and other units when help is requested. He said such a force could have been used effectively on the day of the escape of the gangsters, Mais and Legenza, from the Richmond City Jail.

In an appeal submitted for publication in the February issue of the Virginia Legionnaire, Ackerly pointed out that the department law and order committee would be composed of eleven members, including a chairman and one member from each of the ten districts in the State. Preference would be given Legionnaires who are sheriffs, chiefs of police or Commonwealth's attorneys.

Program Is Outlined.

In fostering respect for law and order, the committee would call on Legionnaires to encourage observation of the law; sponsor the preparation of literature on the subject; send speakers to schools and assemblies to discuss the project, and would "support the enactment of proper legislation designed and intended to cope with crime, including the appropriation of adequate funds for the employment of necessary police officers and the purchase of necessary technical equipment used in the modern detection and apprehension of criminals."

Ackerly emphasized his assertion that the program is not designed as a criticism of law enforcement but is merely a move to bring the potential power of the legion into active support of police agencies.

A national committee of the legion has been created in accordance with the purposes set forth in the preamble of the legion constitution, said Ackerly, who added that if Virginia is not the first State to move for a State department committee on the subject it is among the first few.

Capital Managers Withdraw Films of Hauptmann Trial From Washington Screens

Wilentz Appeal Is Observed by Local Theaters

Taboo Until After Verdict; Capital's Critical Score; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Those who did not see the intensely realistic talking pictures of the Hauptmann trial at Flemington, N. J., on the local screens Friday, Saturday or yesterday will not see them at all.

The newsreel shots of the cross-examination of Bruno Richard Hauptmann by Attorney General Wilentz of New Jersey were ordered off the screens of the Loew houses in Washington—Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia—and RKO-Keith's by Division Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., and Manager Hardie Meakin, respectively, on Saturday under New York home office instructions.

Although no orders had been received from either the producers of the newsreels being shown in his theaters or from home office executives, Zone Manager John J. Payette of the Warner interests, when apprised of the local situation last night, promptly ordered the deletion of the Hauptmann pictures from the screens of the Earle and Metropolitan Theaters and any neighborhood houses on the Warner circuit where they might be included as a regular "clip" in the news release.

Action Asked by Authorities.

This action was taken in deference to the wishes of Attorney General Wilentz, in charge of the prosecution, and Justice Trenchard, presiding at the Lindbergh kidnaping trial. Attorney General Wilentz's wire to all of the makers of newsreels was as follows:

"In the name of the State of New Jersey and in the name of decency, it is requested that you order the immediate withdrawal of Hauptmann trial pictures taken during actual trial sessions. These sound pictures were secured by trickery and in defiance of the order of the court."

All the newsreels have been operating by agreement at Flemington and space has been allowed for one motion picture camera with sound equipment in the balcony of the courtroom. In conformity with an understanding with Justice Trenchard, pictures have been made only when the court has not been actually in session.

Camera Kept Grinding.

It is reported that shortly after the opening of the trial a "still" photographer made a picture of Mrs. Lindbergh on the stand. After a reprimand by the judge the negative was destroyed in his presence.

Last week the newsreel camera was kept grinding while Hauptmann was on the stand undergoing his bitter grilling by Attorney General Wilentz. Several of the newsreel companies released special reels of the trial as it actually was in progress, some confined their releases to half-reel subjects and others to the usual "clip," constituting only the normal length newsreel unit.

Upon receipt of the Wilentz wire, Truman Talley, of Fox Movietone News, immediately informed the prosecutor that while he did not consider that the pictures had been "secured by trickery," he would order their withdrawal until after a verdict in the case has been reached. Identical action was taken by practically all of the producing companies concerned.

So fades from the local screen one of the most sensational celluloid footages of recent times.

George Bushar and John Tuerk announce the continuance of Sean O'Casey's play of "Within the Gates" as the attraction at the National Theater, New York, where it opened last October. It had been the intention of the producers to close the play last Saturday night, but the banning of "Within the Gates" in both Boston and Toronto has served as such a stimulus to interest and box-office intake that it will be continued indefinitely on Broadway. Lillian Gish, Bramwell Fletcher, Moffat Johnston and Mary Morris continue in the roles which they created.

There is a constant flow of evidence across this desk, incidentally, that there is a keen desire on the part of Washington's thoughtful theatergoers to see this play. Some means should be found to gratify this legitimate demand.

"Romeo" Rampant.

Speaking of the New York stage, it is worthy of note that Katharine Cornell, for the third time, has been compelled to extend her engagement in "Romeo and Juliet" in the Martin Beck Theater. Public interest in this production has exceeded even its producer-star's most sanguine expectation, magnificent as the production was known to be when it opened.

However, Miss Cornell has announced that the final performance of the Shakespeare tragedy positively will be given on Saturday night, February 23.

On Monday night, February 25, she will revive Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," with Basil Rathbone as Robert Browning, the role created by Brian Aherne, the Mercutio of her "Romeo and Juliet;" Margalo Gillmore, as Henrietta, the part she played in the original production; Charles Waldron, in his original role of the father; Brenda Forbes, as Wilson, the maid, and Flush, the Spaniel, as himself.

John van Druten's new drama, "Flowers and the Forest," will not be put in production until the first week in April.

The Pierce Hall Players wish to offer the reminder that try-outs will be held on Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week, February 6 and 7, at 8 o'clock, in the Alliance Room of All Souls' Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest, for parts in their third production of the season, "The Field of Honor," by Betty Souby. Candidates for masculine roles particularly are urged to present themselves, since male parts are greatly in the majority. "The Field of Honor" is a manuscript play which will be presented for the first time on any stage in Pierce Hall the evenings of March 28 and 29, with the author in attendance. Ina L. Hawes will direct the production.

Broadway Runs Second.

Washington will watch with especial interest the opening in the Fulton Theater in New York tonight of "On to Fortune," the Lawrence Langner-Arminia Marshall comedy, produced by Crosby Gaige and Charles Heidt, recently presented for the first time on any stage in the National Theater in this city.

Perhaps it would be better to say that the dramatic desks of Washington will watch this New York opening with especial concern, since they will be curious to note just how long the Broadway "death watch" will find it possible to corroborate their earlier verdicts.

"On to Fortune" is one of the season's exhibits which did not win that unanimous first night enthusiasm that usually forecasts a sure-fire hit. But a great deal, no doubt, has been done to the comedy since Ilka Chase, Roy Atwell, Glenn Anders and the others in the cast disclosed its strong points and its frailties to a first night audience that had anticipated another "Pursuit of Happiness," the authorship of the piece being what it is.

It was personaliy confided to this column by the erudite Miss Ann Grosvenor Ayres, who has a finger in Mr. Langner's Westport Playhouse, where "On to Fortune" was first produced last summer, that the Langner-Marshall piece would be kept out of New York until it was right. That having been several weeks ago, the assumption is that "On to Fortune" now is right.

Capital's Score High.

Washington's critical score this season has not been so bad. In fact, it has been pretty tolerably good.

"The Farmer Takes a Wife" was deemed a peculiar combination of minor drama set against an heroic historical background that was worthy of the respectful scrutiny of any discriminating playgoer. Not quite so much was vouchsafed "Jayhawker," although the local critical voices joined in unison anthems celebrating the surprisingly fine performance given by Fred Stone in his first essay at straight character acting in the title role. Both of these appraisals were echoed by New York.

"Laburnum Grove," with Edmund Gwenn, Melville Cooper and their associates turned in extraordinarily deft performances in the principal roles; "Ode to Liberty," with Ina Claire and Walter Slezak at their vivacious and ingenuous best, respectively, and "Three Men on a Horse," that amazingly perfect farcial combination of unknown quantities, we sent along to Main Street with indorsements that were as unequivocal as they were enthusiastic.

The New York noggin-swatters found it impossible to do more than repeat what Washington already had said.

This was true in no less measure in the case of "Valley Forge," the Theater Guild's admirable production of Maxwell Anderson's humanization of George Washington and the Revolutionary War.

So we shall watch tonight's opening of "On to Fortune" with more than ordinary interest. Even if Broadway reverses Washington on this one—as it well may do, in view of all the changes that probably have been made in the play—the score still will be sufficiently high to reestablish the National Capital as the most discriminating and most reliable try-out city in the United States, a reputation it bore for many years during the heyday of such masters of their craft as Charles Frohman, David Belasco, Flo Ziegfeld and others of the "old masters," now lamentably gathered to their fathers.

Sydney Giffen's one-act play, "Crime Conscious," will be presented by five actors representing the MacFarland Young Men's Club in the District's 1935 One-Act Play Tournament, opening tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Roosevelt Auditorium, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest. The members of the cast will be James T. Caruth, Chauncey Davis, John Haja, William Dekelbaum and Howard Lewis. The play has been directed by Isham Keith, jr., and J. Philip McBriarty, and marks the first participation of the Macfarland Young Men's Club in the Capital's annual contest for dramatic honors.

"Crime Conscious" will be the first play on the opening bill. The other two will be Paul Hervieu's "Modesty," as translated by Barrett H. Clark, to be presented by the Southeast Community Players, directed by Elizabeth Beatty, and Rachel Crothers' "What They Think," presented by the Troupers of East Washington Community Center, under the direction of Arthur Rhodes.

Additional preliminaries will be held on February 7, 12 and 14. The finals will take place Saturday night, February 16, with the dramatic editors of the local press as judges.

Mistaken Identity Note.

Of all the recent instances of miscasting, the most flagrant seems to have been putting the impeccable, but wispish, George Arliss in the title role of "The Iron Duke."

Anybody in the sports department will tell you it should have been Jack Dempsey!

Why, Mary, Blowing Your Sundae?

The platinum and talented Miss Mary Carlisle apparently is comporting herself most strangely toward a dish of frozen refreshment. Miss Carlisle, of course, knows better and this would be only a part of her characterization of May Robson's daughter in "Grand Old Girl," the latest RKO-Radio vehicle for one of the screen's most distinguished veterans. "Grand Old Girl" opens at RKO-Keith's tomorrow, supplanting Ann Harding and a stellar cast in the same producing company's "Enchanted April."

Gayety

"HI-DE-HO GIRLS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 28 scenes, starring Ann Corio, with Gene Schuler, Frank Penny, "Coo-Coo" Morrisey, Eddie Bisland, Connie Ryan, Eddie Innes, Lola Pierce, Betty Roland, Lola Bertram, Sally O'Day and the Sixteen Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flagg; dances by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Here is perhaps as nearly the perfect spot as has come along wherein to employ all the superlatives unused for several weeks and to drag out the others that have been gathering dust for months on end.

Washington surely needs no introduction to the No. 1 decoration of the burlesque stage, nor does Ann Corio need formally to be presented to the Capital. One might go on at great length, saying that she is the most beautiful, talented, charming and accomplished artiste to appear as a burleque star, but no recital of Miss Corio's manifold graces—which apotheosize her as the quintessence of everything a burlesque artiste is or ought to be—would be any more effective than Col. James Joseph Lake's simple announcement: "Ann Corio."

Miss Corio remains the Inimitable—and the current week's presentation more than ever bulwarks her as Washington's favorite among favorites.

"Hi-De-Ho Girls" is a better-than-average revue, which, with the star, becomes distinctly one to be seen and enjoyed. The comedians, despite the antiquity of their skits and gag-lines, are funny. And the distaff side is sufficiently accomplished and pulchritudinous to deserve to be included on the same bill with Miss Corio.

Gene Schuler, Frank Penny and the drum-playing, asthmatic "Coo-Coo" Morrisey comprise the contingent of comics, with Eddie Bisland doing most of the straight work. Eddie Innes offers songs and imitations of John Barrymore, Eddie Cantor and Fred Astaire. Connie Ryan is the tenor.

Of the other feminine players, Lola Bertram is the principal tantalizer, with Lola Pierce having several nice song-and-dance numbers. Betty Roland, talented toe dancer, has the spotlight in many of the ensemble numbers. Sally O'Day is the soubrette.

Postlude

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Violin recital by Jascha Heifetz in Constitution Hall; Emanuel Bay, accompanist. Program: Chaconne (Vitali), Concerto No. 4 (Vieuxtemps), Air (Bach), Rondo (Schubert-Friedberg), Prelude to "L'Enfant Prodigue" (Debussy), "Hora Staccato" (Dinicu-Heifetz), Fantasia on themes from "Carmen" (Sarasate).

The Olympian calm with which Jascha Heifetz faced his first American audience a little more than 17 years ago remains the distinguishing trait of his platform manner. That imperturbability, initially mistaken by many observers for temperamental coldness, is the demeanor of a musical aristocrat serenely confident of his heritage. The outward mien conveys no sign of the inner vitality that finds its natural mode of expression in music, and even that expression is controlled by the good taste of refinement. Were one to select the single characteristic that individualizes him among his confreres of the bow, it is the elegance of his style.

The polish which he imparts to whatever compositions he plays is one of the phases of his technical virtuosity; when he makes light of difficulties, it is not with careless dash, but with the utmost care in details. Only a virtuoso such as he could set the pace that he did in the latter part of the Vitali chaconne without marring its clarity and distorting its proportions.

In the matter of facile execution, the high points of his recital were reached in the finale of the Vieuxtemps concerto and in Pablo Sarasate's fantasia. The ease with which he accomplished feats of fingering in their brilliant intricacies elicited one's unqualified admiration. And in all that dexterous legerdemain he maintained a steady concentration on the clear bowing of tone; the fleeting harmonics were as pure as the most heavily drawn sounds of the open strings.

This consistent beauty of tone was no less evident in the technically exacting "Hora Staccato" than in the gravity of the Bach air. The refining touch was ever present, whether the tempo was adagio or prestissimo, and the flow of tone, however agitated, maintained its translucence.

A large audience waxed enthusiastic as the recital progressed; applause in the early part was confined to its proper outbursts at the musical full-stops, but later it was restrained with difficulty, even breaking in at one or two pauses in the Sarasate number. At the close of the program, Mr. Heifetz rewarded the requests for more by playing four extra pieces: One of Brahms' Hungarian dances, an excellent transcription of "L'Ane Blanc," of Jacques Ibert, Godovski's "Alt-Wien," and "The Flight of the Bumble Bee," by Rimski-Korsakov

School Levies' Cuts Assailed

Action of Municipalities Nullifies State Aid, Hall Declares.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 4 (AP). Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, told a radio audience tonight that some Virginia counties and cities were nullifying the benefits of State aid to schools by reducing local levies with each increase in State assistance.

Dr. Hall was introduced by Joseph H. Saunders, Newport News school superintendent.

If the State wants a "dynamic and effective school system," he said, "it will provide the necessary funds." Dr. Hall praised the action of the 1934 General Assembly in providing an additional $1,000,000 to guarantee an eight-month school term for 1934-35, but added:

"However, it now appears in reviewing the budgets of the various localities, that certain of them are endeavoring to reduce their local appropriations proportionately with the amount of increases received from the State."

This, Dr. Hall asserted, neutralizes the benefits in improved educational facilities that the State funds would have assured the local school systems.

School Board Backs Cather For Reelection

Virginia State Senator's Record Praised by Frederick Group.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 4, (Spl.).—The political pot began to simmer today when the Frederick County School Board indorsed the candidacy of State Senator T. Russell Cather for reelection to the upper house from the Twenty-sixth District, comprised of the City of Winchester and the Counties of Frederick, Clarke and Shenandoah.

Senator Cather has served one term. Action of the school board in indorsing his candidacy came as a surprise, he declared upon returning from Harrisonburg.

Signed by J. Fred Thwaite, chairman, and the members of the board, the resolution asserted that Senator Cather had been instrumental in securing passage of the most constructive legislation. Among the measures cited were the general education bill he sponsored for an equitable scheme of appropriation of State school funds, the bill reorganizing the legal department of the State and the bill limiting the cost of county audits.

The resolution closed with a statement that the board urges "his reelection at a time when grave and unusual problems demand trained and experienced representatives in the General Assembly."

County G.O.P. Makes Job List

Strite and Heard Urged for City Magistrates in Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—The Republican State central committee of Washington County made the following recommendations for appointments to county offices to Gov. Harry W. Nice at a meeting today:

For city magistrates, Hagerstown, Samuel Strite and C. Edward Heard; for juvenile court judge, Robert Brindle; for two members of the board of election supervisors, both Republican, the following four names were submitted: Samuel Eckis, Kenneth McLaughlin, Edward B. Knadler and T. W. Summers.

Reports were heard that the Republican group, headed by Dr. H. E. Tabler, Hancock, may send in separate recommendations, but as several of those recommended by the central committee have been known to be affiliated with the Tabler group, the recommendations were looked upon as a compromise that may be satisfactory to both groups.

It was also learned that Dr. J. Hubert Wade, anti-Ritchie leader in the November election, will be consulted with regard to the minority appointment to office. The Democratic State central committee, made up of organization Democrats, will also make recommendations.

The average amount per case was $11.85, or $8.66 a month in the counties and $15.45 for the cities.

Advisory Committee Named by Virginia Administrator; Aims to Better Living Conditions on Farms.

Richmond, Feb. 4 (AP).—A State-wide campaign for rural home improvement was launched today by a State committee.

The State advisory committee for rural home improvement was announced by D. R. Hunt, Virginia director of the Federal Housing Administration, with Harry R. Houston, associate director of the Federal Housing Administration, as chairman. Stuart L. Crenshaw is secretary, and V. R. Hillman is farm representative.

Director Hunt said forming the committee is the initial step in the campaign. Backing the administration are many agencies of State-wide character.

Members of the committee include Miss Maude E. Wallace, State home demonstration agent; John R. Hutcheson, extension director; Miss Martha Creighton, director of home economics education; Walter S. Newman, S. S. Smith, Dr. E. L. McQuade, Robert F. Nelson, H. H. Gordon, W. Stewart Moffett, J. Belmont Woodson, C. Nelson Beck, Dr. Meade Ferguson, Mrs. Guy Roop, Mrs. L. J. Giles, Miss Hallie Hughes, W. T. Daniel, Dr. H. W. McLaughlin, C. H. Cowgill, Thomas B. Howell, C. P. Spillman, Harris Mitchell, E. F. Lawler, Frank Jones, Angus P. Gunn, M. S. Klink.

The committee is to become a permanent organization to continue its work after the Federal Housing Administration has been discontinued. Its immediate purpose is to suggest plans and coordinate the efforts of county and local communities in promoting a campaign for better housing and improved living conditions on Virginia farms. The committee will use its influence to promote the idea of better housing with businesses, bankers, supply dealers, and support local committees in their efforts along the same lines.

Local organizations are to be formed in every section of the State.

Picard Tops Coast Golf In Mire

Cooper in Second Place; Mud Postpones Play Until Monday.

GLENDALE, Calif., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., golfer, proved himself a good mudder today, collecting 18 points out of a possible 24 to lead in the Nassau matches for the Oakmont tournament title and the major share of $2,500 added money.

While the North South champion slopped his way into the lead through the downpour of rain, MacDonald Smith, winner of the medal play yesterday and $600 prize money, and Harry Cooper, Chicago, collected for themselves $100 in cash each.

Cooper's total for the day was 16 points for second place, but he picked up the money by shooting a fine 69, one under par, on the first round. Smith had a 69 on the second round to reap the cash harvest, and also had 15 points for third place.

Torpey Is Fourth.

Bunny Torpey, Kansas City, the dark-horse entry, was fourth with 14, followed by Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, with 13. Horton Smith had 12 points; Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee, 7, and Jimmy Hines, 4.

Because of the sodden condition of the fairways and promise of further rain tomorrow, the last two rounds were postponed until next Monday, after the Agua Caliente open.

Cooper stepped out into the early lead at the end of the first round this morning when he picked up all 12 points at the expense of Picard and Hines. Torpey also started out well, getting 11 on the opening 18 holes, against 1 for Horton Smith and 6 for Revolta. Likewise, Mangrum scored 10 to 4 each for MacDonald Smith and Laffoon in that threesome.

All Surrender Pace.

None of these first-round leaders could keep up the pace this afternoon, however. Mac Smith, with his 69, chalked up 11 points at the expense of Torpey and Cooper, and Picard moved out in front, taking all the possible 12 over Laffoon and Revolta.

Horton Smith, who could get no better than 1 in the first round, gathered 11 in the second from Mangrum and Hines to put himself very definitely in the running again.

Under the Nassau system of scores on a match play basis, each player will have met every other competitor at the end of the four rounds, 18 holes each. The points are scored on a basis of 2 for each nine and 2 on the total, with ties counting 1 point. To chalk up a perfect score the player would have to win 12 points on each round and a total of 48 for the play-off.

$350 Prize Money.

Cooper's low medal round this morning gave him a total of $350 in prize money for the tournament to date, since he picked up $250 for fourth place yesterday. The victor in the Nassau competition will get $500, with the other places graded down to $125 for last.

The results:

Player.	First Round. First nine.	Second nine.	Match.	Total.
M. Smith	2	0	2	4
Laffoon	0	4	0	4
Mangrum	4	2	4	10
Cooper	4	4	4	12

Wilson Teachers Beat American U.

Win, 37-21, for Eleventh Straight Victory.

Wilson Teachers College blasted out a 37-to-21 victory over American University—the eleventh straight—in a slow and exciting game last night on the American court.

With Ollie Tipton, high scorer of the District, and Bobby Lucas, former Scholl's Club ace, peppering the basket with double-deckers, the Teachers rolled up a 19-to-12 lead in the first half and were never headed.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

SHERIFF DAVE HARRIS, who was a salary holdout with the Nats for about ten minutes one season when he misplaced his fountain pen after the mailman delivered his contract, is something of a big-shot with the Atlanta Club in the Southern Association, it appears.

HARRIS.

The swaggering outfielder with the lofty batting average and the depressed sense of the seriousness of it all, last week was summoned to Atlanta for a salary conference, a distinction he never enjoyed in the big leagues. The greatest surprise of the Sheriff's young life occurred on the day he learned that a fellow could play ball and get paid for it, too.

But down in Atlanta, nobody takes the Sheriff lightly. Back in the minors after a half-dozen years in what Dave called the big show, he is quite the cock of the walk as far as slugging outfielders go. Particularly in the Southern Association where fans around the circuit remember the time he joined the Chattanooga Club just in time to knock five home runs in four games and win the 1931 pennant for the Lookouts.

This department's Atlanta operative reports that Harris, after signing his 1935 contract with the Crackers, took the opportunity to survey the Atlanta ball park. Noting the proximity of the right-field embankment, the right-handed hitting Harris declared: "Humph, I guess I'm going to be a turn-around hitter down here."

THE POST'S choice of Joe Mills as the local sandlotter selected for a free trip to Biloxi and a tryout with the Washington Club yesterday received the unqualified indorsement of the youth's mentors at Eastern High School, Charley Guyon and Walter Beall.

"By golly, he's a good boy," exploded Guyon characteristically. "A good boy. I had him for three years at Eastern High School and I liked him. He's smart, too, and Bucky Harris will find him listening to every word that's said. At third base he was a whiz. They don't have to worry about that boy's fielding. He'll have to brush up a little on his hittin', though."

This department couldn't quite understand that last crack in view of Mills batting average of .720, no less, in the high school series until Guyon explained that Mills was murdering strictly fast-ball pitching against the school boys and hadn't seen much curves.

Guyon is qualified to voice an opinion on Mills. The former Carlisle brave was, in his younger days, an umpire in the Southern League, the Virginia League, the South Atlantic, Kentucky State and Georgia-Alabama leagues, and was a scout for a half-dozen major and minor league clubs.

Guyon's assistant at Eastern, Walter Beall, former Yankee pitcher, echoed the chief's praise of Mills. "He's got a great pair of hands out there in the infield and plenty of confidence. He'll hit fast balls all right, and I don't think curves will stop him," said Beall. He's a sure bet to land a job in some league."

Cubs Buy Hurler.

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Frank Coleman, a left-handed pitcher, was purchased today by the Chicago Cubs from the Hartford, (Conn.) club of the Eastern League. Coleman has had previous major league trials with the Detroit Tigers and Boston Braves.

Neusel Stops Rival.

London, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Walter Neusel, German heavyweight, tonight scored a surprising technical knockout over Jack Peterson, of England, in the eleventh round of a scheduled 15-round fight. Neusel weighed 198 and Peterson, 182.

N.Y.U. Is Rated 5-1 to Trim Hoya Five

Georgetown in Fine Trim; Best Performance of Year Predicted.

ONE of those basket ball rivalries that began back in the dark ages, well 1910, anyway, will be renewed Friday night at Tech High School, where Georgetown meets New York University. And if the Hoyas had any right arms to spare they'd gladly give a couple for the privilege of snapping the visitors' two-year winning streak.

But the Violet reigns an overwhelming favorite and will enter the fray as the 5-1 choice. Two years without a loss is a mighty impressive record, and the team that makes it has to have the stuff—championship stuff.

Friday brings with it Capt. Ed Hargaden's big opportunity and he is ready to make the most of it. Hargaden chased the elusive All-American honor last season and the one before, but never quite caught it. He was named on the All-Conference team and given honorable mention on the national quintet, but he never got to the top.

Even With Gross.

Now, as the teams go battling into the final half of the season, Hargaden rates on par with Sid Gross, New York's floor-leader and their performances this week may decide the question. Gross outscored the Georgetown captain, 14-9, in the first game which N. Y. U. won, 37-21, but Hargaden's spectacular play was not overlooked by the sports scribes.

Coach Fred Mesmer predicts that Georgetown will play its best game of the season against New York. The boys are in good physical condition and have a new slant on life since knocking off Carnegie Tech and Yale.

Georgetown's undefeated freshmen meet Eastern High School's fast-traveling quintet in a preliminary game that makes the program the brightest, from a basket ball viewpoint, of the season.

Gallico Ducks His Greeting Kiss, but Still Gets It in the Neck.

By Paul Gallico.

LONDON (by Mail).—Naturally enough, if you were in London and saw that Jackie (Kid) Berg was expected to fight that night against a Frenchman named Humery, and you were a ringworm by nature, you would go, wouldn't you? And especially if you wanted to see the famous Albert Hall, where the English prize fights are staged by the American promoter, Jeff Dixon, who lives in France.

And if you saw on the program that an American lightweight by the name of Wesley Ramey was fighting and that he was a member of the stable of Peter (The Fox) Reilly, one of the few colorful and exciting fight managers living, you would most certainly leave your hat and coat in your seat and wander down to the dressing chambers below, and ask the ugly-looking fellow with the punched nose and the sealing-wax ears whether Mr. Peter Reilly, the American manager, was about.

Of course you would. And, of course, I did. And so I was standing sort of loose-like in a little alcove outside the dressing rooms when suddenly the person of Mr. Peter (The Fox) Reilly, looking more than ever like George M. Cohan in the "Song and Dance Man," appeared in the doorway. That person gave one look and then threw both arms around me and kissed me. I believe it landed on the neck.

I pressed Mr. Reilly to my bosom and we stood there, thus tenderly, for an instant. Thus is it when two expatriates meet suddenly and the sight of one another sends home surging through their beings. Now, often and many times, Mr. Reilly has considered me one large and difficult pain back home, as, for instance, when I scolded him publicly for taking Challenger Max Schmeling for a motorboat ride in a bootlegger's shallop with two Liberty motors battened below hatches, or when I have suggested, as I have so often, that I had not had the utmost confidence in certain prize fights in which Peter played the part of the manager.

And, likewise, I have sometimes found Peter a little difficult and subversive to the fine, clean morals of the prize fight business, but I must say that he looked very, very beautiful to me that night. I must have found equal favor in his eyes.

I am sure that Peter has not been in Paris long enough to have contracted the kissing habit. The Frenchmen are always kissing one another. Their fighters kiss before, after and during their matches. The referees kiss the judges, the promoters kiss the referees, the stockholders kiss the promoters. I do not know who kisses the stockholders. All I know is that it is very catching and Peter has been in Paris for many months, fighting his Freddy Miller. So long, in fact, that Mrs. Reilly recently sent him a snapshot of his little stone shack in Brooklyn with the inscription: "This is where you live."

However, I am not worried because I did not see Peter kiss anybody else the rest of the evening. There was one moment after Ramey had knocked his opponent out with a right and left to the solar

Tigers Rated At Top by Gehringer

Modest Infielder Says Club Good Enough to Retain Flag.

Calls Yanks 'Team to Beat' Lauds Nats' Defensive Play.

DETROIT, Feb. 4 (AP).—"Silent Charley" Gehringer, who this summer will round out a decade of high-lass second-basing in the American League, talked about baseball today—and in a half hour poured forth about as many words as came from his modest lips during the entire 1934 campaign.

Charley, always affable but never loquacious, usually answers questions about the weather, baseball and everything else with a short "nop" or "well, maybe . . ." Today, however, he broke right down and announced that Detroit's infield "perhaps isn't going to break any legs" and looks good enough to him to again be the main cog which will carry the Detroit Tigers through to another American League flag.

"Any team has to have breaks to win a pennant," said Charley, "and with our young infield I'll bet—well, I'll wager a guess—that we come down in front again."

The Tiger second-sacker "agreed with the boss that New York will be the club to beat next summer." The boss—Frank J. Navin, president of the Detroit Baseball Co.—recently said the club that beat the Yankees would win the flag, and said the Tigers will turn the trick.

Here's just how talkative Charley was when asked to rate the 1935 American League infields as he saw them:

New York—"Lots of possibilities but with several younger players who still have to prove their ability; no infield, however, that could be called weak."

Washington—"One of best defensively, if Kuhel is at first, Meyer at second, Bluege at short and Travis at third."

Athletics—"One of the best in the league, offensively and defensively, with Hooks perhaps playing first, Foxx catching, Williams at second, McNair short and Higgins third."

Cleveland—"If that club gets a good start it will cause trouble, but its infield is good offensively, not defensively, although I've never seen Berger."

Browns—"Defensively very good, but of Burns, Melillo, Strange and Clift, only Burns can hit."

Boston — "Cronin and Werber make a strong left side, but I'm not sure about the right side with Dahlgren and Bishop, if they are used."

White Sox—"Just fair offensively and not too good defensively, but I'd like to see them go good—Chicago's a good baseball town; I'd like to see St. Louis get going for the good of the game, although there's nothing much can be done about the town."

Tigers—"Greenberg, Rogell and Owen were good last year and will be better this summer." (Charley didn't mention anything about Second-baseman Gehringer.)

C. U. to Oppose Loyola Tonight

Seeks Second Victory of Year Over Rival.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S bucket brigade meets an old and rather troublesome opponent tonight at Brookland in Loyola, of Baltimore. The freshmen play host to Silver Spring High School in a preliminary game starting at 7:15 o'clock.

Catholic U. has won 16 of the 27 games in the marathon series that had its inception long before the oldest resident of Brookland can remember, but when Loyola does win it really wallops the Cards. Mute testimony to this are the series figures. C. U. scored 791 points in winning its 16 games, and Loyola scored 773 in taking the rest.

The Orioles have won seven of 11 games this season, coming along at a rapid gait after losing three preholiday games. The Cards defeated the Orioles earlier this month at Baltimore, 33-19.

Coach Fod Cotton plans to use the same starting line-up that turned back Davis-Elkins last week—Augusterfer and Schmarr, forwards; Lieb, center; Gearty and Rosenfield, guards.

Baseball Clubs Win Player Tax Decision

St. Louis, Feb. 4 (AP).—The United States Court of Circuit Appeals today affirmed a decision that baseball clubs may charge off the full purchase price of players' contracts in reporting income tax for the year in which the players are bought.

Affirming a ruling of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, the court denied contention of Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, that the purchase price should be spread over the playing years of any player's life.

Trojan Receipts Off.

Berkeley, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP).—A decrease of nearly $24,000 in gross football revenues at the University of California in 1934, as compared with 1933, was reported today by W. W. Monohan, graduate manager. The 1934 revenues after visiting team guarantees had been paid totaled $274,799. The 1933 figure was $298,730.

Bonthron Off Form, Ny Seen Conqueror

By Roland Logan.

THE sixth meeting of Glenn Cunningham and Bill Bonthron, between whom world supremacy in distance footracing seems to lie, is now history, but in the language of the newspapermen I am going to try to "mop up" on that stirring battle which Glenn won last Saturday night in Madison Square Garden. In this article I am going to give you some of the "inside" of this race and, with your indulgence, assume the role of prognosticator and pick Cunningham to defeat Bonthron the next time they meet.

As you already know, Cunningham finished first last Saturday night, and Gene Venzke, Bonthron and Eric Ny, the Swedish star, trailed him to the tape in that order. The fifth man, who was so regarded from the beginning, was Bill Ray, of Manhattan College. The last named, in my opinion, hasn't reached his peak as yet and should be heard from before he is through in competition with the better-known mile runners.

Talked to Them Both.

Having accompanied Cunningham to New York from Washington, where he trained last week, indoors, I was in the dressing room before the race. Glenn shared dressing quarters with Bonthron and Ny. I talked to the latter pair and also to Venzke before the contest and what I learned from them led me to believe the race would end as it did.

Venzke had just completed a season of cross-country running with the University of Pennsylvania harriers, this having given him an edge with respect to condition, timing and pace. His long, rhythmic stride seemed more effortless in this race than in previous ones.

Bonthron told me that, living in New York City, he had been unable to get proper sleeping and training conditions as he did when a competitor for Princeton, where he was graduated last spring. Later, I saw that he did not consume as much time warming up as is his habit, which made me think he was lacking in strength and stamina.

Seasick on Voyage.

Ny had just arrived from Sweden eight days prior to the race and had suffered with seasickness most of the trip. He complained of stomach disorders Saturday night. He admitted that he was able to work out only three times after arrival in New York.

As you know, Ny is the European 800 and 1,500 meters champion. I believe he will be better prepared for his next meeting with Cunningham, Bonthron and Venzke, scheduled in Madison Square Garden on February 16.

Cunningham's time was 4:11. His world's indoor record is 4:08.4. In my opinion, he will improve on Saturday's time in his next race. Thus far he has been handicapped by long train rides, cold weather (precluding outdoor training, which is necessary to best condition); and less than his normal amount of constructive conditioning. He is at present in Iowa City, studying at Iowa University for a master's de-

Rally Fails G.W. In 43-41 Loss To West Va.

Howell's Final Shot Slides Off Rim as Colonials Quintet Bows.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—Despite three furious rallies, the last of which saw Capt. Jimmie Howell's midcourt shot bounce high off the basket rim and then fall to the floor at the final gun, George Washington University's fighting Colonels bowed to West Virginia here tonight, 43 to 41.

Never in the lead but a dangerous threat to a favored Mountaineer five after the first ten minutes, during which the home team ran up a 20-to-2 advantage, George Washington outfought the Glenn-coached team throughout the second half only to fall short of a tie or a victory on that all-fated last fling by Howell.

Colebank Stars.

With less than four minutes remaining, West Virginia drew away from a 38-to-37 situation on two clever shots from under by Albie Colebank, slender forward, who slipped away from his guard to cage these precious points. Phares added the forty-third Mountaineer point on a free throw, but George Washington wasn't through.

Howell revived the Colonials' chances with a 20-foot toss from the side and then Leemans coolly sank two fouls.

Big Joe Stydahar, giant Mountaineer football and basket ball star, was a thorn in the collective Colonials' side in the first half, his five feld goals contributing largely to his team's 25-to-21 advantage at intermission. In the first seven minutes, Joe flipped in four double-deckers from close range as the Mountaineers appeared to be running away with their guests.

Colonials Whittle Lead.

Coach "Little Sleepy" Glenn then inserted three substituttes and George Washington, aided by the timely passing and shooting of Walter Bakum, a substitute for Clarence Berg, gradually whittled down an 18-point deficit to 4 points. Bakum was removed late in the second half with an eye injury.

Grayson Spurns Fixed Mat Career

Palo Alto, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP).—Bobby Grayson prefers to continue to play football for Stanford to a "guaranteed career" as a professional wrestler.

The 1934 all-America football star recently turned down an offer from a wrestling promoter, which among other things guaranteed Grayson "would not lose a match in his first year," it became known today.

Shepherd Wed To Widow, 24

Is Married to Mrs. Leppo at Cumberland.

WESTMINSTER, Md., Feb. 4 (AP).—William Leroy (Bill) Shepherd, Western Maryland College ace and the Nation's 1934 high football scorer with 133 points, today had joined the ranks of the benedicts.

The marriage of Shepherd and Mrs. Margaret Annah Leppo, of Westminster, was announced today by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Ebaugh. Shepherd is 23 and his bride 24.

They were married Saturday by the Rev. Adrian K. Flora, pastor of the Church of God at Cumberland. Bruce Ferguson, also star on the Green Terror football team, was best man.

The newlyweds visited the bridegroom's home at Clearfield, Pa., after the wedding, and returned here today, where they will live while Shepherd, a senior, finishes his college course.

The bride is a graduate of Westminster High School and attended a business college in Baltimore. Her first husband died two years ago. Her father is assistant cashier of a bank here.

Shepherd, a half back, is perhaps the most famous football player developed in Maryland in several years. In addition to topping the Nation's scorers last season, he was a main cog in the Green Terror machine last season and starred for the East in the East-West fray at San Francisco on New Year's Day.

Stand Pat, Injured, Is Out of Coast Event

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—A stumble just after the break Saturday at Hialeah Park will prevent E. F. Seagram's Stand Pat from running in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, trainers said today.

The Canadian-owned 4-year-old threw Jockey Tommy Malley out of the saddle. The horse, son of John P. Grier, will not be able to run again for several weeks. The handicap in California is February 23.

National League Is Optimistic Over 1935 Operation of Braves

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP).—Although called together primarily to formally approve the 1935 schedule, National League club owners are expected to devote most of tomorrow's meeting to tackling a more pressing problem, namely, the operation of the Boston Braves.

It is established that the Braves will again occupy their old park, and league circles tonight held the optimistic belief that the question of finances would be satisfactorily solved tomorrow.

Reports were that Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves, has obtained sufficient funds to carry the club through the training season, and that he is making satisfactory progress toward raising the $50,000 the other club owners asked him to procure prior to the start of the season.

Fuchs said he and his associates are confident they can meet all conditions imposed on the Boston Club at the last league meeting and that they will be able to convince the other club owners of the Braves' ability to carry on.

Fuchs is trying, among other ways, to raise funds through the advance sale of tickets and he said already more than $30,000 has been subscribed through this channel.

There was little or no trade talk as the managers gathered for fanning bees prior to tomorrow's formal session.

"Looks like the boys have about shot their bolt," said Bill Terry, Giant manager, up from Memphis for a few days. "I doubt if there are any more big deals."

.319 Hitter Points Out His Value

Miserable and Irate, He Rejects Offers From Officials.

'I Can't Live on Fruit Fans Threw at Me,' He Declares.

By Jack Cuddy.

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Joe "Ducky-Wucky" Medwick, youthful left-fielder of the champion St. Louis Cardinals and storm center of the last world series, admitted tonight that the Cards' salary proposals are unsatisfactory and that he will join Pitcher Dizzy Dean as a hold-out unless offered at least $10,000 for the 1935 season.

"Club officials apparently believe I can live for a year on the fruit and vegetables which thoughtful Detroit fans contributed during the last game of the world series," Medwick told the United Press with a wry smile. "Such is not the case. I left that garbage right there in the outfield where it landed, and now I want a salary approaching my ability as a player."

Peeved at Bickering.

Two days of futile dickering with President Sam Breadon, Vice President Branch Rickey and Manager Frankie Frisch had punctured the glories of last season's pennant and series triumphs and left the 23-year-old husky in the brown suit quite miserable and irate.

Medwick gave his ultimatum during an exclusive interview at his downtown hotel just before leaving New York for his home in Carteret, N. J. He said he had not received his contract yet. Didn't know if the St. Louis offices had mailed it. But he know from talks with Breadon, Rickey and Frisch that it would be unastisfatcory.

Figures Self Important.

Medwick said he figured himself almost as important to the club in the Cards' approaching defense of the National League pennant as the mighty Dizzy Dean. "Without boasting," he explained, "I think my play last year was an important factor during the season and in the series. I was second-ranking batsman on the Cards, with an average of .319. I made 18 home runs and led the league in triples with 18.

"I made 11 hits during the seven games of the series and probably would have equaled the record of 12 if Commissioner Landis had not taken me out of the last game."

Landis took "Ducky-wucky" out of the game when Detroit fans threatened to riot because of Medwick's altercation with Third Baseman Marvin Owen, who accused Joe of trying to spike him while sliding into third after a hit to right center. Medwick said he didn't blame Landis for taking him out because there might have been trouble with the fans otherwise.

"Delivering the Goods."

"Brandon and Frisch tell me I've only been in the majors two full seasons and that I shouldn't expect a Babe Ruth salary," Joe concluded. "What difference does it make how

Nats Sign Stone; Outfield in Fold

Only Travis, of Infielders, Has Accepted Terms.

Washington's 1935 outfield no longer is among Clark Griffith's contractual worries. With the signed contract of Johnny Stone, announced yesterday as safely in the possession of Owner Griffith, the entire body of Washington outfielders have accepted terms.

In contrast to his success in signing his outfielders, Griffith as yet has encountered no such luck in corralling his infielders. Thus far only one-fourth of his regular infield—Third Baseman Cecil Travis—has accepted terms. Still without the fold are First Baseman Joe Kuhel, Second Baseman Buddy Myer and Shortstop Lyn Lary. Monte Weaver and Bump Hadley are the only regular pitchers who have returned their 1935 contracts—signed.

Jockey Porter Signed By Greentree Stable

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—Jockey Earl Porter, the little brown-eyed boy who led the jockeys in Florida last winter, signed a contract today with Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable.

The addition of the clever Porter gives this stable a strong pair of jockeys. Silvio Coucci, considered the peer of the Nation's riders, is already under contract to Mrs. Whitney.

Coucci Pilots Black Buddy to Five-Length Triumph at Hialeah

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Fla., Feb. 4.—Silvio Coucci, who earns a nice living piloting race horses for Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable, began riding today in Florida and showed a continuance of his good Bowie and Santa Anita form. The little Italian rider was astride Black Buddy, the property of his employer, in the day's feature race and the combination made every post a winning one.

Black Buddy won by five lengths because Coucci decided that was sufficient margin. He was pulling up during the last sixteenth and could have had a ten-length lead in the stretch had he so desired.

Jirasol, 2d, the big gray horse from Chile, followed Black Buddy to the judges' stand, with Sunador third, a half-length away. Black Buddy ran the 7 furlongs in 1:24 4-5 and paid a $5.60 mutuel.

Takes Big Early Lead.

Black Buddy fairly flew out of the starting gate and was three lengths in front 50 yards away from the 7-furlong pole. Grainger and Sunador were closest to the leader. Coucci looked over his shoulder at the far turn and drew in on Black Buddy. Nearing the stretch, he let out a couple of notches and drew away only to slow down his mount again in the stretch.

Jirasol II, with Carl Hanford up instead of M. Villena, the Chilean, ran a good race, but was no match for Black Buddy.

The sixth race caused the chief excitement of the day. Pass Up, the winner, was disqualified for boring in and not giving Col. Greene racing room in the stretch. Col. Greene was moved into the win money and paid $12.00. Sun Idol and Show Boy gained the place and show.

Zowie Triumphs.

Hal Price Headley's Zowie, a $4.70 favorite, had to be the best to win the opening jaunt for juvenile maidens. Zowie had Torita for company on the dash down the straightaway, and the public choice managed to get the verdict by only a head margin. Krona was third. Wright rode the winner.

Trainer George Alexandra added another victory to his string in the second race when Herowin came from behind to score over De Valera and Porter Call to pay a $15.60 mutuel. Watson gave Herowin a perfectly timed ride. Toana, the early pacemaker, tired approaching the stretch.

Jockey Johnny Gilbert rode one of his occasional winners in the third. Impromptu, at $21.10, defeated Merovech and the favored Fred Almy. The money horses moved together in the stretch run. Impromptu was soundly trounced in his last two starts.

Pays $60.60 Mutuel.

The long-shot parade reached a new high for the day when Mickey's Man took the fourth race to reward the faithful with a $60.60 mutuel. Mickey's Man came from behind in the stretch to lead Beaver Dam and Dancing Cloud to the wire. Stickhandle, the favorite, ran nowhere in particular.

Big Red, with Coucci up, won the seventh race from Stall Man and Flowery. Sky Lad, a well-played paddock tip, broke down in the race. Big Red paid $13.

Dear Al:

The disqualification of Pass Up in the sixth race demonstrated the childishness of an average race crowd. Not more than 500 of the 15,000 in the stands noticed that Pass Up had fouled Col. Greene, but when Jockey Nick Wall, on the latter, rode up to the stewards' pagoda to indicate a foul claim, his backers roared applause. It was new hope. Pass Up betters soon caught the spirit of the thing and they booed in chorus. The stewards called for the riders as first Wall and then Wright walked across the track, where they were booed or applauded, according to the ticket held by the race fan. When the boys returned they were given the same reception. The booers and the applauders ran a dead heat when the numbers were changed, revealing the disqualification. On the other hand, Jockey Coucci was wildly applauded for his fine ride on Black Buddy. Even the two blondes in back of the press box, who were screeching, "Sunador, Sunador," all through the running of the race, joined in. But that, my friends, is what makes hoss racin'.

BILL.

First race—Autumn Leaves won his last start in impressive fashion and may make it two in a row in this company. James City probably is the best of the pair, but I don't fancy McManus as the rider. Black Highbrow should go well.

Second race—Mannie, perhaps you never heard of him, is a fair sort of maiden. Had a rough trip in his first outing here, but finished a bang-up fourth. Seabo is slated to ride and I expect no mistakes. Slave's second last out was a beaut. Bye Bye Mary for the show.

Third race—Jim John appears to be a standout in this field. Both trials and races stamp him as the best. Epaulet is ready to run and will be there if the top fellow makes any mistakes. Twoaday may complete the money picture.

Fourth race—Diverting gets another chance. He is strictly the class of this field and his last race must be tossed out. Banish Fear appears ready to run an improved race and Meade will have him close. M. J. Brennan to take care of the others.

Fifth race—This is a rather evenly matched field. Recent races have shown that Ladfield is nearing a victory. Might score over this group at a fair price. Captain Argo and Some Pomp have plenty of speed.

Sixth race—Octaroro meets rather formidable company in the turf event, but has two wins to his credit over the grass layout. Breaks from No. 1 post and may have to be caught. Miss Careful is a stout contender. Little Lad belongs close.

Seventh race—Saint Kitts is one that Clocker Mike dug up. Said to be a brisk worker with a chance to upset the field horse. Cousin George and Fairly Wild have high figures.

Ft. Washington Boxers In Nine Bouts Tonight

Nine boxing bouts will be held tonight in connection with the Fort Washington intercompany tournament to select a team to participate in the Third Corps Area championships. In addition to the nine elimination bouts, there will be three contests between boxers training at the R. R. Y. M. C. A. The contests will be held in the post gymnasium at Fort Washington.

Line-ups:

Test Indicates Cavalcade In Form

Favorite for Handicap at Santa Anita Works Impressive Mile.

SANTA ANITA, Calif., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—The Brookmeade Stable's Cavalcade, America's greatest 3-year-old in 1934 and favorite for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, February 23, removed all doubt of his fitness today by galloping a mile over a sloppy track in 1:41 3-5.

Trainer Bob Smith gave a large off-day crowd a glimpse of the Kentucky Derby winner in action, when he worked his charge between the first and second races. Starting in company with Okapi and Shining Jewel, the English-bred colt soon outdistanced his stablemates as he clicked off the quarter in 0:25 1-5, reached the half-way mark in 0:50 3-5, turned the three-quarters in 1:15 3-5, and finished well in hand.

Hialeah Handle Passes 1934 Mark

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Hialeah Park, world's most beautiful racing plant, smashed last year's records in attendance and mutuel play during the first 15 days of the 1935 meet. Almost $4,000,000 passed through the mutuels.

"The racing has been of the most spirited kind," said Joe E. Widener, president of Miami Jockey Club, "and the enthusiasm of the public knew no bounds. With the season gathering momentum day by day, we can look forward to a most successful conclusion."

Mutuel play last Saturday, fifteenth day of the meet, broke all previous records at $376,137, bringing the total for the period up to $3,946,097. The "handle" during the first 15 days was $337,568 ahead of the same period last year.

Ninety per cent of the money passing through the mutuels is returned to betters. The State takes 3 per cent, which to date amounts to $118,392.91.

Favored Eblis Takes Race at Fair Grounds

New Orleans, Feb. 4 (AP).—Heavily backed at 40 cents on the dollar, Mrs. C. Troutt's Eblis today defeated a field of horses which had never won more than one race, in the 5½-furlong headliner at the Fair Grounds.

The 3-year-old son of the great Diavolo, third in his last two starts after winning his second race, jumped into an early lead and was never headed. Unlike his two previous races, the gelding did not stop in the stretch and finished three lengths in front of Mere Prince, from the Monarch Stable. Costlier was third in the field of seven.

By John R. Vosburgh.

IT MAY be all over but the shouting in respect to who will win the interhigh basket ball championship, but for Western High students there's still plenty of reasons for using the vocal chords.

The biggest and best season Western has seen in years has the Georgetowners rushing full tilt for second place in the final standings, with that objective more or less at stake this afternoon when the fast-travelling Red team faces Tech, at Tech. The teams are tied for the runner-up position.

Simultaneously, Eastern will be adding the final touches to its masterful championship drive when it meets Roosevelt, at Roosevelt, with the Ruff Riders facing a fate about as certain as that of a man in cell 13 of the Sing Sing death row. Unless it springs a miraculous uprising, Roosevelt will become the defending champions' seventh straight victim.

Assured of finishing at least in third place, the season is already one of unprecedented success for Western.

Anybody's Game.

The Tech-Western conflict promises considerably more interest for several reasons. It has every indication of being anybody's game, with the added possibility that interhigh followers may see such an unusual sight as Western virtually clinching second place in the series.

The first time the teams met this year, Western took a rather impressive 22-19 decision, but there are those inclined to comment that the Techmen were sadly off-form that particular afternoon.

At any rate, renewal of the individual duel between Capt. Phil Maloney, of Western, and Capt. Reds Daly, of Tech, occupies a very choice spot in this afternoon's performance, with the burden resting largely on Daly to redeem himself to some extent, at least, for the memorable manner in which Maloney kept him shackled in the first game.

Stopped First Time.

Daly, on that occasion, met the surprising reality that he could not score from the floor for probably the first time in his career. That was how close Maloney was covering him. The Tech pilot scored two foul shots; the Western pilot scored 2 points plus two baskets for 6 points.

Western and Tech are aiming at two things today especially—Western, to prevent a tendency to let up in the last half, and Tech a tendency to fail to get going soon enough. Western led 14-4 at halftime in the first game, but was outscored in the second half.

Bang, Bang, Britisher Counted Out in Drum

WOODMAN.

Woodman, Ex-Tar, Once Knocked Englishman for Merry Tune.

By Bill McCormick.

NOT so long ago a ver; diminutive scribe, who boasts an extra shot of grade A aggressiveness for every inch he lacks in stature, bustled through a throng clustered about the dressing room of a fighter who had been rendered hors de combat by a low punch in a bout at the Auditorium.

Right through the throng bustled the scribe, through the throng and under the arm of an imposingly large individual who was guarding the portal so the stricken gladiator could writhe and groan in comparative privacy. The arm of the imposingly large individual swooped down upon the diminutive scribe.

"Lemme go in," insisted the d. s. "I'm a reporter an' I wanna see what's goin' on in there."

"I never seen ya before," countered the large individual, which was indeed the truth as the diminutive sports scribe had not been a sports scribe long, having been promoted to that department after a fistic encounter with Huey P. Long.

The diminutive sports scribe departed sputtering in search of Maj. Harvey L. (Heinie to you) Miller, secretary of the Boxing Commission, who was discovered demonstrating the effect of low blows to a group of commission doctors.

Ougts Be In Ring.

"Who's 'at big guy on the door up there?" demanded the diminutive sports scribe. "He trown me out. He dunno nothin' about fights, an' if he does, why ain't he in the ring, instead of fightin' reporters?"

"Chuckle, chuckle," chortled Secretary Heinie. "Mebbe Bat Woodman, our dressing room inspector, don't know nothin' about fightin', but he used to be some shucks as a middleweight." And thereby hangs a tale.

Bat Woodman, who was duly christened Francis Charles Woodman upon his debut in this cruel, cold woild some 33 years ago in Hammond, Ind., fought his first professional fight at 14 in a preliminary to one of the early main events of Jim Clabby, also a native of Hammond. For his services, the Battler received $1.50 and a fine going over.

Woodman continued to fight for some time, but finally drifted into the Navy. Time, tide and naval orders finally found him assigned to the presidential yacht Mayflower. His duties on the Mayflower not being arduous, the Battler spent much time on duty at the Washington Navy Yard, and fighting professionally.

Worked Up a Feud.

At Sportland, the old Berwyn, Md., punchbowl, Woodman worked up a beautiful feud with one Silent Patterson, a pretty good middleweight. The first time the Battler went to bat with Silent, he decisioned him. The bout was close enough to call for a return match, in which, much to the surprise of everyone, probably including Mr. Patterson, the Battler was knocked colder than a heated taxicab on a February morning.

The Battler boiled, boiled so hard that he finally offered to meet the Silent one the following week on a winner-take-all basis, with a $50 side bet. The Silent one readily agreed and Woodman rocked him to sleep with a right in the first round. Silent Patterson retired instanter.

The highlight in Woodman's career was reached months after he had retired from active ring work. H. M. S. Raleigh, one of Britain's better battle wagons, had been wrecked off Nova Scotia and the rescued crew called at Washington. The crew of H. M. S. Raleigh challenged the Washington contingent of the U. S. Navee to a series of athletic events, including a boxing meet.

At the Navy Yard and from such ships as were stationed hereabouts, a crew of boxers was selected that was complete in every detail but one—no middleweight could be found. The Battler was summoned before the "Old Man."

"Looky here, Woodman," said the O. M., "You know Navy tradition. We never like to forfeit a bout. We have no middleweight to fight those Limies, so you're elected. You have a week to get in shape and if you don't win, don't come back."

"Gee whiz," reminisces Bat, "Dose woids cut me deep. De Ole Man was such prince they holt a lot, an' I knew I hadda win dat bout."

Came the night of the bouts and the U. S. Navy was doing splendidly when it came the Battler's turn to clash with the British middleweight. For a round the British bombardier clouted Woodman with everything but the English Jack.

"My goodness, whatta a left hand dat guy had!" Bat recalls.

In the second round, Woodman caught the Britisher with a stiff left to the jaw on the ropes. Quick as a junior grade lieutenant discovering an unpolished shoe, the Battler sank home a beautiful right to the middle of the English middleweight's stomach. The Englisher sailed serenely through the ropes and backed directly into the bass drum of the U. S. Navy Band, beside which sat Lieut. Charles H. Benter. Referee Heinie Miller took the numbers from one to ten while the Britisher reposed in the drum.

Thus did Woodman achieve the distinction of besting the British Navy and the Limie achieve the distinction of being the first fighter to be counted out in a bass drum.

Perhaps it is a very fortunate thing for the diminutive sports scribe that there were no bass drums at the Auditorium the night with which our story opened.

Medwick Refuses Cardinals' Terms

long I've been in the majors if I'm delivering the goods? If they don't think I'm worth the money I'm asking, why don't they sell me? I don't think they would have much trouble doing that."

Medwick declined to reveal his 1934 salary, but it is understood to have been around $4,500.

Mystified, Says Breadon, By Dean's Tactics

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—A couple of leading actors in the current baseball drama, "Will Dizzy Sign Them Papers?" acknowledged each other with courteous formality again today, but got absolutely nowhere as far as developing the plot was concerned.

Samuel Breadon, the silver setter who controls the St. Louis Cardinals' moneybags, and his great right-hander, Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, kept bumping into each at the hotel where both are staying, but neither brought up the subject of Dizzy's discontent with the $17,500 contract for 1935 which he thinks should read $25,000.

"He called me today on another matter," said Breadon, "and we did not talk contract at all. It's developing into a mystery play. Everybody seems to know about Dizzy being a hold-out except me. I read the papers, sure, but the last time we talked contract, Dizzy said he was perfectly content with the figure on it—$17,500. Except that he hasn't signed it and sent it in, as he promised, that's still all I know about it officially."

Dizzy roamed the town most of the day, preparing to leave tonight for two weeks at Hot Springs, Ark.

If he sticks to his Saturday communique, even $25,000 won't do now. He said Breadon must accept that within two days or the figure would automatically rise to $30,000.

Va., Navy Ring Bouts Stir 'Experts'

By Bill McCormick.

GUEST rooms in the padded cell wings of some of our better institutions for goofies are being tidied for the rush of new patrons expected late in the week from the ranks og boxing "experts" who now are bordering on nervous prostration trying to figure in advance the outcome of the Navy-Virginia dual boxing meet at Annapolis next Saturday.

Many are of the opinion that Spike Webb's Midshipmen will decisively turn back attack of the Cavaliers, who have defeated them for the last two years. Just as many are of the opinion that Johnny La Rowe's Virginia contingent will make it three in a row against the Naval Academy squadron.

Difficulty in predicting the outcome of the meet hinges largely upon the fact that Navy is strongest in the divisions in which Virginia is weakest and vice versa. Navy boasts no fighter likely to defeat Archie Hahn, Virginia's 115-pounder; Gordon Rainey, lightweight, or Maynard Womer, 145-pound puncher.

Armijo Favored.

Virginia hardly can hope to cope with Armijo, Midshipmen 155-pounder; Michel, Navy middleweight, or Lambert, 175-pounder. Marion Brooks, Virginia lightweight, is generally conceded an almost even chance against Jack Blitch. Freddy Cramer, Cavalier heavyweight, has been pointing all season for the shot at Slade Cutter and may turn the tables on the highly regarded Navy hope.

Navy's hope of winning the meet will be dimmed considerably by the absence of McMasters, prize 115-pounder, from the starting line-up. McMasters is considered by Coach Webb the best boxer on his team. He is at present in sick bay with infected tonsils and his place in the ring will be taken by Midshipman H. H. Hemenway, the only Navy noggin knocker to bow to Richmond last week.

Gordon Rainey, Virginia's feather-erweight conference champion, should encounter little difficulty in taking the measure of Midshipman J. B. Rawlings, who failed to show anything startling in his exhibition against Richmond Saturday.

Blitch Great Boxer.

Maynard Womer, Cavalier conference welterweight champion, in the improved form he has shown this year, rates several notches higher than the hard punching G. L. Conkey, who carried the Navy banners against Richmond. Womer punches straighter, faster and just as hard as Conkey and only a lucky punch can cause Maynard any trouble.

G. W. Armijo, Navy's 155-pounder, hits like the tenth Sazerac cocktail. His bout against Mortimer Caplan, the smooth boxer, should be a classic. Armijo is being rated an almost overwhelming favorite in this division.

McClung Southpaw.

E. A. Michel, Navy's lightning ast middleweight, probably would find Bill McClung easy picking if it weren't for the fact that Bill is a southpaw. Southpaws being the poison they are, Michel may find all his speed of no avail.

Scrappy Lambert wallops hard enough to punch holes completely through Jack Noll, Virginia's light heavyweight, but if the Cavalier fights the fight of which he is capable, a different story may be told. Noll's left jab is exactly the right antidote for Lambert's left hook, but in most of his recent bouts Jack has gone right-hand crazy, which is one way to become thoroughly punched against Lambert.

In the ordinary course of events Slade Cutter, Navy's heavyweight, would be rated a 3-to-1 shot over Freddy Cramer, who is, perhaps, the best heavy in the Southern Conference, but several factors make his victory very doubtful. In the first place Cutter has not had a bout this year, Western Maryland and Richmond having forfeited in the heavyweight division. Cramer has been busy winning all three of his starts.

No Love Is Lost.

Cramer is cocked and primed, ready to do or die for dear old Virginia against the Naval bombardier. No love is lost between the two big boys and it seemed it all started last fall on the football field. After a bit of tackling, Cutter is reported to have addressed certain remarks to Cramer, namely, to wit:

"The rules don't let me do anything to you now, but just wait until I get you in the ring next winter."

Cramer, ordinarily the most amiable of individuals, has been waiting and preparing. So well are Virginia and Navy matched in the other divisions that the heavyweight bout may decide the issue. Even if it doesn't, it promises to be one of the most interesting collegiate scraps in years.

Duke Five Host To Tarheels Tomorrow

Anything Likely to Occur According to Tradition; Both Dangerous.

DURHAM, N. C., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—The big chance of the current basket ball season comes for Duke University's cagers Wednesday night when North Carolina, rated probably the outstanding team in the conference, invades the Blue Devils' stronghold for the first of the annual pair of games between two teams.

With only one loss in 15 games and undefeated in Big Five and Southern Conference circles, Carolina brings one of the finest records in the school's history into its game with the Blue Devils. Their only loss was to Army, when they tired after four consecutive victories on a Northern trip.

Beat Army Handily.

Some solace can be found by Duke supporters in the fact that Duke trimmed Army handily and defeated Washington and Lee by two points more than the Tarheels could muster, but in other games with common foes the Phantoms have displayed a distinct superiority over the Blue Devils.

Past games between the quintets have shown, however, that anything is likely to happen when the two teams meet. After defeating Duke twice in the regular season last year, Carolina was defeated by the Blue Devils in the semi-finals of the conference basket ball tournament at Raleigh.

Boasts Three Stars.

Carolina has three of the finest individual cagers in the conference in Stuart Aiken, Jim McCachran and Ivan Glace. Duke has shown no regular individual star all season, Coach Eddie Cameron using ten players or more in practically every game. Take it from the followers of the two teams, there is little difference between the first and second outfits, in fact, so little that the two teams can hardly be classified as first and second.

Duke has shown an ability this season to be exceedingly dangerous against higher-ranking foes. Thus far, they have won all their "big" games—Army, Maryland and Washington and Lee.

Charest, Ex-Champion Quits Tourney Tennis

One-Armed Veteran Ends His Competitive Net Career.

By John R. Vosburgh.

CLARENCE M. CHAREST, Washington's grand old man of the tennis courts, is passing quietly out of the picture as a tournament player. One of the most beloved and novel figures in American sports history, the 51-year-old, one-armed three-time National Veterans' champion, feels that time has caught up with his competitive career.

"Thirty years of tennis slow up your legs, you know," he said yesterday, a bit regretfully. "Last year I found it getting harder to get to the ball, a little harder to cover the court. For awhile I thought I might be able to carry on a year or two more, but I've decided it is better to quit now. It's better to quit as gracefully as possible, I suppose."

Despite a rather unfortunate early season last year, Charest again went to the finals of the National Veterans championships at Forest Hills, but fell in the title round before Ray Bidwell, 45-year-old youngster of Boston. In the early part of the summer he suffered a recurrence of that old bugaboo of tennis players, "tennis elbow," and was forced to cut his tournament activity short after participation in two doubles tourneys.

The ailment left him shortly before the Nationals, but in November Charest fell down a flight of stairs and sprained his arm. But it is his legs, not his arm, which the doughty fighter claims is forcing him to leave the game, for the effects of the sprained member have almost disappeared.

Though an old man at tennis, Charest an energetic middle-aged lawyer, is planning to continue playing merely as a pastime as long as he can walk.

"There's a big difference between playing a week straight or more in a tournament and playing just now and then," he said. "I'll never give up tennis so that I won't be playing occasionally."

The story of Clarence Charest's athletic career has had varied narrations. But the true story is that which reveals that, but for a twist of fate baseball might have gained a great player to the loss of tennis. Charest had never touched a tennis racket when he lost his right arm at the age of 17 as the result of a gunshot wound. Baseball was Charest's game but the fates ruled otherwise and replaced it with tennis.

It was a mighty good substitute, Charest says. In his opinion, you can't choose between the two games. At 20, he took up tennis and rose quickly to the ranks of the better players of the country. A number of times he played in the leading tournaments and at one time went to the third round of the national championships before falling before Watson M. Washburn, No. 4 ranking player.

Manor Picked For Women's Title Golf

Event to Be Held in June; Post Play Slated for Congressional.

THE District Women's Golf championship, won last year by Miss Winifred Faunce, of Manor, will be held at Indian Spring Country Club in June, the executive committee of the District Women's Golf Association decided at its meeting yesterday.

The Washington Post match play with handicap tournament—looked upon as the next outstanding event to the District—will be staged at Congressional, home course of the champion, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie. It will be played in the spring.

Dates for these two tournaments, and the courses and dates for some 10 other tournaments will be announced at a meeting of the tournament committee next month.

Mrs. Roy C. Miller, of Kenwood Golf and Country Club, was selected as tournament chairman. Mrs. Miller formerly was golf chairman at Kenwood. She succeeds Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor. Mrs. L. B. Schloss, of Woodmont, will be assistant to Mrs. Miller.

Mrs. Peyser Named.

Appointed as first team captain was Mrs. Theodore Peyser, of Woodmont Country Club, successor to Mrs. W. F. Holtzman, of Army and Navy.

Of particular interest was the announcement that the first and second team matches among the ten District clubs would be played in two-ball foursomes instead of the singles. The Scotch doubles competition struck a popular chord with the women, and they voted unanimously to install such a system, starting this spring. Eight women will make up a team.

Mrs. H. King Cornwell, Columbia; Mrs. W. R. Woodward, Army-Navy; Mrs. D. R. Hutchinson, Beaver Dam; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Chevy Chase; Mrs. A. Kennedy, Kenwood; Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, Washington, and Mrs. Gil Hahn, Woodmont, were named on the tournament committee.

Reappointed Captain.

Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, was reappointed as the inter-city first team captain, and Mrs. J. F. Gross, Indian Spring; Mrs. R. C. Miller, Mrs. N. J. Waldron, Beaver Dam, and Mrs. Charles K. Wing, Army and Navy, association president, were named on the committee with her.

Mrs. C. H. Merrillat, of Washington, was named second team captain, and Mrs. Herman Stabler, Columbia, assistant; the rules committee will consist of Mrs. H. A. Knox, Congressional, chairman; Miss Elizabeth Harris, Kenwood, and Miss Sue Gantt, Kenwood.

Mrs. H. L. Simcoe, of Manor, will be chairman, and Mrs. C. E. Purdy, Beaver Dam, assistant, on the prize committee. Mrs. A. E. Dedicke, Army-Navy, will be in charge of publicity; Mrs. J. R. DeFarges, Columbia, of clippings, and Mrs. Gross, Mrs. Peyser and Miss Hacker will make up the sub-handicap committee.

Shoremen to Play Swarthmore Five

Have Regained First Place in Maryland League.

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 4 (Spl.).—Apparently back in stride after spanking St. John's last Saturday to regain first place in the Maryland Intercollegiate League, Washington College faces the strong Swarthmore quintet here tomorrow night.

Saturday the Shoremen engage Johns Hopkins in another league battle. Washington College defeated the Blue Jays by a comfortable margin in their first game and Coach Tom Kibler expects his men to repeat.

Kibler has decided to use Skipp at center against Swarthmore, selecting the elongated tap-off artist after experimenting with the available talent. Evans and Bilancioni will start at forwards, with Ward and Barry at guard.

Wheat Slumps In Stop-Loss Selling Drive

Cotton Prices Advance 2 to 4 Points Under Quiet Trading.

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Selling to stop losses of holders of future delivery grain contracts gave a maximum downward lurch of 2⅛ cents to wheat and corn markets today.

Intensified disappointment over gold decision uncertainty was the chief cause assigned by traders. Wheat reached the lowest price level since October 31, and both corn and rye outdid the season's bottom record. Downturns of values were in the face of definite word from Washington that whatever the Supreme Court's decision might be the Government's monetary program would be maintained.

Wheat closed nervous ⅞ to 2 cents under Saturday's finish; May, 94½ to 94¾; corn, 1⅝ to 2 cents down; May, 82⅛ to 82¼; oats, ⅝ to 1⅛ off; and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to a rise of 12 cents.

Lowest prices of the day in all grains were current shortly before trading was ended. Right from the outset a notable downward tendency became evident, and this was much accelerated later, despite a transient steadying effect due to exchange directors authorizing temporary suspension of grain business for all or part of a day, in case the Supreme Court issued a decision during trading hours.

On the other hand, bears contended that because of gold decision delay buying power in the grain futures markets would remain curtailed as throughout the past week, and that wholesale flour buyers and bakers would restrict wheat purchases to a minimum.

Cotton Market

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Between continued uncertainty over the gold clause decision and an inclination to await developments in other quarters, trading in cotton was very quiet today. Offerings were light following last week's liquidation and prices held to a small range, closing steady, 2 to 4 points higher.

There was further discussion on the cotton hearings before the Senate Agricultural Committee, which some thought might lead to a modification of the Administration's foreign trade policies.

Liverpool cables said Bombay buying in that market had been offset by hedging and liquidation attributed to disappointment over the delay in the gold case decision.

Exports today 16,367 making 2,044,366 so far this season. Port receipts 12,873. U. S. port stocks, 2,811,279.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil closed steady and unchanged to 5 points net higher, but values were some 4 to 6 points under the best levels of the day. Sales, 23 contracts. Support was induced by rumors of much higher prices for tallow, greases and other competing fats, as well as the firmness of crude oil and buying by brokers thought to be acting for refining interests. The sharp advance in the hog markets was an additional bullish factor. Some unsettlement was caused by the break in grains, the disappointing Washington news relative to the gold clause case and scattered liquidation by houses with Wall street and Southern accounts. Bleachable spot, nominal; March closed 11.02; May, 11.07; July, 11-12, September, 11.15.

Outlook for Auto Sales in 1935 Engages Careful Study of Business Leaders; Industry Expected to Regain Normal Level of Operation.

New York, Feb. 4.—Few problems of the day are receiving such careful and intensive study among those who seek to appraise the business outlook for 1935 as the outlook for sales of automobiles to consumers.

Alone among the so-called durable goods industries, automobile manufacturing has displayed the ability to regain what might be termed a "normal" level of operation. The effect of its recovery upon other industries has been profound, as reflected, for example, in the consequent expansion in operations of the steel manufacturing industry to above 50 per cent of its rated capacity. But, it is being asked, will the current impressive burst of activity in automobile manufacturing last, or will it culminate within the next few weeks and lead to a subsequent sharp recession?

The answer to this crucial question lies with the automobile using public. Production of over 275,000 cars and trucks in January, and scheduled output of 350,000 in February and even more in March, will stock dealers for the active buying season. In some quarters, it has been said that uneasiness over possible labor troubles later also has stimulated production schedules. However, most spokesmen for the industry are confident, from advance reports by dealers, that the public is actually buying automobiles quite actively and will continue to do so on a growing scale as the spring approaches. As a result earlier estimates that 3,000,000 units would probably be produced and sold this year are being moved up by the more optimistic to 3,250,000 cars and trucks, which would mean a gain of 16 per cent over 1934 and almost 70 per cent over 1933.

Manufacturers Look to Auto Replacements and New Buyers.

While it is now too early in the season to gauge the likely volume of consumer buying of automobiles from actual sales data, some light may be thrown on the sales outlook by examination of the statistical position. Aside from export sales, which amounted to some 12 per cent of total production of automobiles in this country during 1934, manufacturers may count upon two chief sources of demand. First, there is the replacement market. Secondly, there is the new customer market, which includes the many persons who ceased to be car owners during the depression, but can again afford to own an automobile as business conditions improve and their buying power recovers.

The replacement market is the more certain one. The depression has taught, however, that it is a dangerous thing to estimate the replacement demand for any one year by taking the number of registered cars and dividing that figure by the "estimated average life" of automobiles. Thus, it has been estimated that only 1,450,000 cars were scrapped during 1933, although there were almost 22,100,000 cars and trucks registered in this country at the beginning of the year. If that rate of replacement had been maintained indefinitely, the average life of a car would have to be 15 years.

Severe curtailment of average individual incomes during the depression accounted for this obviously abnormally low replacement rate. However, the result has been to increase the average age of the cars now in actual operation, and hence to make more difficult further delay in making replacements. If an average life of 9 years be assumed for motor vehicles, then the future replacement demand alone will call for an output of 2,500,000 units annually, since the total domestic registration at the beginning of this year was about 22,500,000. Such an annual replacement figure would compare with actual domestic sales of 2,464,000 cars and trucks during 1934. Replacement indications alone, therefore, tend to justify optimism as to 1935 sales prospects. Reports which have reached the trade of recent wholesale scrapping of used cars encourage expectations on this score.

Sales of Cars by Owners Blamed for Lack of New Buying.

One factor which held down replacement buying during the depression was the sale of relatively new cars by owners seeking to economize. Such persons left the ranks of car owners, and by their sales reduced the number of new cars required for replacements. Also, the greater extent to which cars have been laid up by owners for shorter or longer periods as an economy measure has reduced the need for replacing them. Such factors, insofar as they continue to operate, may reduce replacement buying below the 2,500,000 figure indicated if motor vehicles now registered were to be replaced henceforth on the average of every nine years.

New customer demand under prevailing conditions arises from two sources of about equal importance—purchases by former car owners who reenter the ranks as business improves, and buying by those who acquire cars for the first time. The peak in the number of motor vehicle registrations at the beginning of a year in this country was attained in January, 1931, when 23,684,000 cars were reported in operation. The number declined to 22,083,000 at the beginning of 1933, a drop of 7 per cent within two years. During 1933, however, the tide turned and a net rise of 297,000 in the number of automobile registrations were recorded. For 1934, a larger net increase, representing sales to new owners, will probably be shown when data on the total number of registrations on January 1, 1935, become available.

With the normal increase in population, and any further improvement in business conditions, annual sales of new cars to new customers of 500,000 would seem possible at least for the duration of a period of economic recovery.

Bond Market Changes Little In Dull Session

Federal Loans Range Lower; Sales Total $6,812,000.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The bond market experienced its dullest session in six months today and so scant were both buyers and sellers that prices showed little change from the previous close.

Transfers aggregated only $6,812,000, par value, the smallest for a full 5-hour session since last August, and the turnover in Governments of $1,020,000 was less than half of Friday's total.

Traders Remain Cautious.

In the over-the-counter market as well as on the Stock Exchange, investors showed no disposition to abandon the sideline position taken early last week to await the outcome of the gold-clause cases before the Supreme Court and the absence of substantial offerings indicated that portfolios had undergone whatever adjustments had been contemplated and would not be disturbed until the gold cases had been settled.

Government bonds ranged from one-thirty-seconds to five-thirty-seconds higher in Treasury issues to two-thirty-seconds lower for fourth 4¼ Liberties and Home Owners Loan 3s, and high-grade corporate bonds were generally steady despite the lack of interest.

On Gaining List.

Fractionally higher prices were paid for Santa Fe 4½s at 109¾, Liggett & Myers 7s at 132½ and Union Pacific 4½ at 105½. American Telephone 5s were one-eighth lower at 107. The Associated Press average of 10 low-yield bonds was .02 of a point higher at 108.8.

Gains and losses were fairly equally divided among lower-priced bonds. International Telephone 5s were one-half higher at 67½. Consolidated Coal 5s gained 1⅛ at 33½ and Nickel Plate 5½s advanced a point to 72¼. Among issues selling lower were North American Edison 5s, Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Postal Telegraph 5s and Southern Railway 4s. The Associated Press averages for 10 rails, 10 industrials and 10 utilities were changed only a minor fraction of a point.

United Fruit Net Mounts to $12,049,299

National Steel's Profit Jumps to $1,467,825; $242,530 in '33.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 4.—The thirty-fifth annual report of the United Fruit Co. has just been issued. The company reports that the year's net income, after depreciation, interest and taxes, was $12,049,299.60, or $4.11 a share, as compared with $9,240,941.65, or $3.15 a share in 1933.

Cash and Government securities on hand at the close of the year, exclusive of its $10,000,000 insurance fund, amounted to $40,957,541.61, a gain of $3,638,734.21 over the preceding year. In 1934 the company charged off $8,849,000 for depreciation, and appropriated for capital expenditures in 1935, including unfinished work now in progress, the sum of $8,161,000.

During 1934, $8,717,985—equal to $3 per share—was paid in dividends.

During the year the company imported from its tropical divisions 49,879,345 stems of bananas, about 3,000,000 more than was imported in 1933.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Directors of General Motors Corporation today ordered the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock.

This maintains the $1 annual rate in effect since the second quarter of 1932. The regular disbursements were augmented by a 50-cent extra last September 12.

The dividend is payable March 12 to stock of record February 14.

As previously announced, the preliminary earnings report for 1934 showed net equivalent to $1.99 per share.

New York, Feb. 4.—The Shawinigan Water & Power Co. reports for the year 1934 gross earnings of $12,504,406, a gain of more than 4 per cent, compared with the 1933 gross of $11,945,863, and net earnings before depreciation of $3,367,443, an increase of 15 per cent, compared with net of $2,943,043 for the preceding year. After depreciation charges and transfer to contingent reserve, the balance before income tax is equivalent to $1.04 per common share, against 83 cents per share in 1933.

(Associated Press.)

National Steel Corporation reports for the quarter ended December 31 net profit of $1,467,825, equivalent to 68 cents a share on the common stock, against $242,530 or 11 cents a share in the final quarter of 1933. For the year 1934 net profit was $6,050,724, equal to $2.80 a share against $2,812,407 or $1.30 a share in 1933.

Ohio Oil Co. has informed stockholders of its intention during 1935 to consider the payment of dividends on the common stock semi-annually instead of quarterly.

Southern Pipe Line Co. declared a dividend of 15 cents on the capital stock, payable March 1, to stock of record February 15. A similar payment was made last September 1.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange opened cheerful today, with general hardening of prices due to the Anglo-French agreement. It reacted in some cases on profit taking. Television shares were strong, while trading in foreign bonds, German securities, West African gold mining and oil shares were good. Other issues were easy. The market closed steady.

Paris—Negotiations at London regarding the new Anglo-French agreement caused prices to act favorably on the bourse today, although trading was quiet. The closing was inactive.

Berlin—Due to the smallness of business, prices on the bourse weakened considerably, and closed at the lowest of the day.

Steel Operation Rate Advances To 54½ on Stronger Demand

Cleveland, Feb. 4.—A 43.6 per cent increase in pig iron production in January, with a net gain of 22 active blast furnaces, and a further rise of 1½ points in steelworks operations last week to 54½ per cent, manifest the strong and unusually diverse character of manufacturing demand for iron and steel, states the magazine Steel.

Pig iron production last month averaged 47,627 gross tons daily, up 14,466 tons; and total output was 1,476,424 tons, an increase of 448,418 tons. Both these gains were the largest for any January in history. The increase in the number of blast furnace stacks to 89, operating January 31, was the largest for the month except January, 1920, when the net gain was 23, and January, 1925, with a net of 22. The month's output was the highest since June, 1934.

This gain in pig iron is expected to be matched with a long stride in steel ingot production for January when official figures are announced this week, the steel rate as an average having been 13 points higher than in December. The month's steel bookings for leading interests were twice those of December, and thrice January last year. Steelmakers now confidently expect the current operating rate to continue or improve through February and March.

Deliveries Become Problem.

Deliveries to automobile manufacturers are becoming a problem, and it is more apparent they are striving to build up inventories of materials and parts. Auto body sheet production is now 80 per cent. The majority of mills are booked to capacity for cold-rolled sheets for this quarter, and consumers are seeking preferred position for the second quarter. Tin-plate mills are operating at 85 per cent.

The automobile industry has made a good start on its schedule for 1,000,000 cars this quarter, last week's output of 78,000 raising the total for January slightly above 300,000. Washington is renewing efforts to level out peaks and valleys, but if introduction of new models be moved up several months as proposed, midsummer unemployment in the steel industry may be intensified.

Steel makers must decide by February 20 on prices for second quarter, and so far as pertains to automobile manufacturers—always antagonistic to advances—this is a sellers' market. Opinion in the industry, however, is divided, with some leading producers leaning to a continuation of present levels. Reports that premiums have been offered for prompt shipment pertain to drawing extras, sometimes waived, which mills now find it easier to obtain.

Rails and Building.

Structural work and railroads are contributing little to steelworks activity. Both evidently are awaiting lifts from the Government—structurals, in the $4,000,000,000 public works program; railroads in proposed freight advances and low interest rates on Federal loans.

Structural shape awards in the first five weeks this year are only 75 per cent of the tonnage in the comparable period last year. Last week they amounted to only 8,500 tons. Amtorg Trading Corporation has ordered for Russia 4,500 tons of forged steel wheels and axles from the Carnegie Steel Co. Wheeling & Lake Erie has purchased 2,200 tons of rails; Atlantic Coast Line is inquiring for 5,000 tons. New Orleans has awarded 4,500 tons of cast pipe.

Scrap consumption is rising, but many consumers are oversupplied and Steel's scrap price index last week dropped 43 cents to $11.65. A valley steelworks purchased 50,000 tons, and 70,000 tons were taken for shipment to Italy.

A decline in scrap shipments was principally responsible for a reduction of 5.5 per cent in December iron and steel exports to 282,655 tons. Imports fell off 44 per cent to 19,708 tons. For the year 1934 iron and steel exports of 2,832,764 tons were up 117 per cent; imports, 316,761 tons, down 23.6 per cent.

Steelworks operations in the Pittsburgh district last week rose 6 points to 44 per cent; Chicago, 7 to 66; eastern Pennsylvania, 1½ to 30; Buffalo, 1 to 45; Birmingham, ½ point to 32; Detroit held at 100; Wheeling, 95; Youngstown, 64, while Cleveland was off 1 to 78 and New England 16 to 52.

The scrap reduction has lowered Steel's iron and steel price composite 4 cents to $32.56, while the finished steel index is unchanged at $54.

Sea Food Group Ordered to Quit Price Fixing

Washington Chapter A.I.B. Sets Date for Annual Banquet.

By Karl von Lewinski.

Washington Sea Food Dealers Association of Washington was yesterday ordered by the Federal Trade Commission to cease further price-fixing agreements.

The order specifically prohibits the dealers' group from "entering into or carrying out agreements or combinations to fix and maintain prices in sea foods and from establishing from time to time the minimum prices to be charged for sea food, to designated purchasers or groups of purchasers."

Printing and distribution of schedules to set minimum prices, and agreements among the respondent members of the association not to sell sea food to any purchaser or group of purchasers below the minimum price level, were also prohibited.

The local firms cited in the order will also be restrained from any effort to prevent or hinder price competition in the business.

Annual A. I. B. Banquet.

Thirtieth annual banquet of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will be held in the Willard Hotel on Saturday, February 16, at 8 p. m., it was announced yesterday.

Frank M. Perley, of the American Security & Trust Co., general chairman, stated that in excess of 500 junior and senior bankers are expected to attend the function.

The entertainment committee, Paul J. Seltzer, chairman, has engaged Meyer Davis' Orchestra to furnish music for both dinner and dancing. Harry M. Taylor, of Philadelphia, will act as master of ceremonies. During the dinner, professional entertainers will give a program of variety and amusement.

An unusual atmosphere will be created in the decorations of the ballroom and banquet tables. They will portray scenes from the "gay nineties" and will be suggestive of earlier banquets given by the chapter. Robert G. Winthrop, First National Bank of Alexandria, is chairman of the committee in charge of decoration.

The Critics.

It's an amusing thing to read the critics of the days gone by, and note how they were all agreed that certain books would never die. When Hardy's "Dynasts" first appeared, the critics took off every lid, and said this noble volume neared the best that Shakespeare ever did. Old Edmund Gosse was in the lead, the foremost critic of his time, he claimed this was, indeed, indeed, the finest of all modern rhyme. And his decrees had always weight, and precious were his words of praise; but is there any living skate who reads "The Dynasts" nowadays. The Hardy poetry, I guess, will not endure till end of time; while multitudes peruse his "Tess," some three or four may read his rhyme. How many novels have been hailed as epoch-making works of art! They shone a little while and failed, then went into the garbage cart. Oh, I could name a hundred books which once set critics' blood aflame; and now they're merely ghosts ands pooks that cringe outside the hall of fame. And many books that got no boost when first they met the public eye, have barged along, and now they roost among the laurels, high and dry. Now every year there is some tome to which the critics point with glee; "The author brought the bacon home," they cry, in throbbing ecstasy. Perhaps it stirs up quite a fuss before there comes a grievous slump; but every book that's boosted thus, I always feel, will hit the dump.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

SHARP contrasts are noted in the Dirksen rent questionnaires and the widely condemned inquiry into living costs made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics last year to furnish information to President Roosevelt with regard to restoration of pay.

BAKER.

It showed at the time that the cost of living in Washington had advanced only 1 per cent from June to November, 1934, although it was admitted that the cost of living for custodial employes during that time had increased 2 per cent. A significant feature of the Lubin (Labor) questionnaire was the statement that rents in the Capital had advanced only seven-tenths of 1 per cent.

Now, along comes Representative Dirksen with a stack of questionnaires filled in with lamentations of rent increases of from $2.50 to $30 a month; wails of overcrowding and discrimination against Government employes.

"Many members of Congress," E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, said last night, "were inspired to comment on the contrast between conditions here and conditions at home. They pointed out that the tax rates are higher in their home cities than in Washington, yet rents are hardly half as much.

"It is to be hoped," the employe leader said, "that they will not only remember that when they are dealing with legislation affecting Government employes, but that they will send the word back home, where salaries of $1,200, $1,440 and $1,600 in Washington look so good. If people back home can only be made to realize that living costs here are higher than they are anywhere else in the country except New York, they might be less envious of Government employes and consequently less hostile to legislation in their behalf."

Tarheels Plan Entertainment.

North Carolinans in Government service are especially invited to attend the North Carolina State Society's valentine dance and card party in the west ball room of the Shoreham Hotel Monday night, according to Miss Jane Elizabeth Newton (C), Patent Office, society secretary. Miss Newton, who also is president of the Duke University Alumni Association, announces plans are nearing completion for a gala benefit dance and card party to be held at the Shoreham March 2. Bill Werber is chairman of the ticket committee.

Employes of Statistics Section of Research and Planning Division, NRA, enjoyed a dinner last night at the Broadmoor Hotel. Skits and songs, followed by dancing, were entertainment features. Dr. Theodore J. Kreps was master of ceremonies.

HUGH G. GRANT, State Department, president of the Alabama State Society, urges all Alabamans in Government service to attend the society's party tomorrow night at the Kennedy-Warren. Former students of Alabama colleges will be honored guests at this affair, according to Hugh Dowling (P), Internal Revenue, who is in charge of arrangements. The ballroom will be divided into sections, marked by banners of each school, where reunions will be held preceding the dance.

H. H. Bennett, director, Soil Erosion Service, Interior, has returned after a hurried inspection trip of the Service's projects along the Atlantic Coastal section. He addressed the Southern Agricultural Association at its annual meeting in Atlanta last Friday.

The McKees are Honored.

Mrs. Mabel P. Hollister (P), National Herbarium, Smithsonian, gave a tea Sunday afternoon at her home at 1819 Ontario place in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. McKee, National Park Service, who are soon to return to their work at Grand Canyon National Park, Colo.

Among the others present were Prof. F. A. McClure, of Lingnan University, China, formerly of the Department of Agriculture, and Mrs. McClure; Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., Bureau of American Ethnology, and Mrs. Roberts; Interstate Commerce Commissioner Dr. Walter M. W. Splawn; Paul H. Oehser (F), editor of the National Museum, and Mrs. Oehser; Mr. and Mrs. Larry H. Judson; Mr. and Mrs. John Ade Plugge; Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, and Mrs. Hollister's sister, Miss Lillian Pfrimmer, and their father, Will W. Pfrimmer, Hoosier poet.

LEON H. KELSO (F), junior biologist, Biological Survey, has compiled a booklet called "Winter Food of Ruffed Grouse in New York," which is being distributed to game conservationists and field workers.

"In behalf of the ruffed grouse," he says, "which is considered the most important upland game bird in the Northeastern States, many people often wish to know whether certain areas present a good environment, of how the environment may be improved for these birds. In judging such areas it is important to know whether suitable grouse foods will be available there during the critical winter season."

Marketing problems are now more important to potato growers than production problems, and stabilization of potato production is what growers need most, Dr. William Stuart, senior horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, told members of the Ohio Vegetable Growers Association at the association's February meeting in Columbus.

Broadway
—Goes to Miami

By Ed Sullivan

Road Map as Guide.

Cape Charles, Va., Feb. 3.—The road map which I obtained from the very pretty girl in a travel bureau said nothing about finding spring across the Virginia State line. The road map gave distances in miles and it specified certain recommended highways that a Broadway columnist should follow to reach Miami. It suggested Route 25 as a starter, and then Route 25 melted into Route 44, which in turn gave way to Route 40.

It was all very interesting and very efficient, this road map. I looked at it closely before passing through the Holland Tunnel to make sure that I was headed in the right direction. It was to be my compass through the snow and ice that rendered the highways out of New York slippery and treacherous. But the road map hadn't warned me that 200 miles out of New York, when we crossed the Virginia State line that I'd find spring, primping itself in the mirror of Chesapeake Bay.

That it was spring there can be no doubt. There was a mellowness to the air that only that delightful season can give and the sky was blood-red and streaked with banners which spring hangs in the sky. There was no snow on the ground and no ice. There was no harshness in the air. It was as if spring had encamped here, waiting for its sudden dash upon frozen Broadway. By the time this reaches print your Miami-bound correspondent will be on the outskirts of the Florida city. But I guarantee that nothing Miami can offer will match the first thrill of meeting spring just across the Virginia State line. That is the greatest thrill I've received in years, because when I left Broadway the air was cold and frost-bitten. The streets were covered with hard ice.

To be transposed in a few hours from Arctic blasts to the blood-red skies and warm air of Virginia was an elegant experience.

Leaving New York City was not wtihout incident. At Sheridan Square a red light held me up in traffic. Facing me was the Sheridan Square Theater of the Loew chain and sitting in the ticket booth was a lady cashier who figured in the Hauptmann case. It was she who testified that on a certain night Hauptmann bought a ticket from her and flung a bill in her face.

My attention was caught by the marquee, where the attractions of the week were spelled out. The first line of the marquee read: "Bing Crosby in 'Here Is My Heart.'" The second line spelled out "Mickey Mouse" and "Chic Slae." The third line read: Special Attraction—Pictures of Hauptmann on Stand." You wondered to yourself why Loew's Sheridan didn't call attention to the lady cashier who forged an important link in the State of New Jersey's case against Bruno.

Driving into Norfolk, Va., or rather ferrying into that city, you are reminded that this is the birthplace of Margaret Sullavan, the flicker star, and Leah Ray, the gorgeous gal singer with the Phil Harris band.

I saw both of them just before I took off for the Deauville Beach Club, which, I understand, is one of the plush spots of Florida.

Miss Sullavan is appearing in "The Good Fairy" with Herbert Marshall, Reginald Owen and Frank Morgan at Radio City Music Hall. This is a flicker which you must include in your list. Director William Wyler, with a rare gift for farce, has turned the stage play into a magnificent and entertaining picture. The work of Frank Morgan in this predominates, with Reginald Owen giving him a close battle for top honors. The Sullavan girl rarely has been better, and after Herbert Marshall shaves off the beard which camouflages him in the early reels he scores heavily.

Driving through the smaller towns of Maryland and Virginia, you find the movie houses advertising largely the pictures of Buck Jones and James Cagney. Evidently the outskirt towns prefer the rough-and-ready technique of the films' he-men. In this town Guy Kibbee and Aline MacMahon are featured in "Babbitt."

I just asked the Western Union manager in the office who was the favorite cinema star in this town of 2,500 Virginians. "Shirley Temple," he said, and there was no doubt in his voice and certainly no lack of enthusiasm.

* * * *

Passing through Princess Anne, Md., a town that is 15 miles from the Virginia State line, I bought the local paper, the eight-page Marylander and Herald. The flippancies of a Broadway columnish were halted by the modest notation on page 1, "Established 1828." Here was a paper that I'd never heard of and yet it is dated back more than a century. Not a line on page 1 was devoted to the Hauptmann case and, indeed, there was not a line about it in any part of the paper. There was no discussion of the anxiously awaited ruling of the Supreme Court on the legality or illegality of the gold clause. Instead, the three-column lead story concerned the decision of Somerset County officials to stamp out slot machines which have appeared on Main street. Despite the lack of news coverage on the stories that are hot news in New York, despite the complete absence of a sporting section, and despite the utter lack of a Broadway column, this tipy paper has existed 107 years and the issue which I bought was comfortably filled with advertising.

At each of four gas stations I asked the attendant what he thought of Franklin D. Roosevelt. "Well, this is a Roosevelt climate," said the first one, and the answers of the others were identical in thought. They believe that Roosevelt is doing a "right smart" job of it in the White House. I must tell that to Postmaster General Jim Farley when he arrives in Miami next Thursday.

National Championship.

The big event of the tournament year is fast approaching. On February 11 players from all over America will get together at the Pierre Hotel in New York for the Grand National championship under the auspices of the U. S. B. A. Eleven teams have qualified for the outstanding event and will be brought to New York for competition among themselves and against the master players of the country. There will be an open pair contest and a mixed pair and team championship.

Wild and Woolly.

Wild and woolly bidding occurred on the hand below. North and South had a chance to distingish themselves, but North slipped.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ 9 ♡ 9 6 5 ◇ A K Q J 10 9 ♣ A 8 6
♠ K Q J 10 6 3 2 ♡ — ◇ 7 ♣ J 10 7 3 2	N W E S	♠ 8 5 ♡ J 10 7 ◇ 8 6 3 ♣ K Q 9 5 4
	♠ A 7 4 ♡ A K Q 8 4 3 2 ◇ 5 4 2 ♣ —

South	West	North	East
1♡	4♠	6◇ (1)	Pass
7◇ (2)	7♠ (3)	Dbl. (4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A mild overbid. However, North was forced to it by West's preempt which would make only five diamonds not sound like a slam try.

4—Probably the worst and most thoughtless bid of the year. North should have made a forcing pass, thus showing a willingness to play the hand at seven notrump if South has the spade Ace. North has solid diamonds and first round control of the other off suit, and is certainly ready for a grand slam if South holds solid hearts and the spade Ace. Actually the double is a command to South to dismiss the thought of seven notrump.

5—South's final decision to pass, although wrong on a result basis, can not be criticized. When a good player doubles an obviously cheap sacrifice contract, he is pleading with his partner not to allow himself to be pushed, and South respected his partner's wishes.

The Play.

Of course, seven notrump would have been a laydown and North-South would have won a tremendous rubber. The seven spade contract could have been defeated five tricks had North used his head. South's raise from six to seven diamonds only could have been predicated on a void of clubs and the Ace of spades. Solid hearts and the spade Ace alone would not give South the right to raise to seven as North's six diamond bid did not definitely mark the latter with the club Ace—a spade void might have justified such a bid. North, therefore, should have opened the club Ace in an effort to give his partner two ruffs. The King of diamonds was his choice, and even after his partner gave him the deuce, he did not wake up and shift to clubs. As a result, East and West got out for a three-trick set or 450 points, less 100 honors, and then won the rubber. North's bad bidding and play created a swing of over 4000 points against him.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

	♠ A Q 3 2 ♡ A 7 2 ◇ Q J 6 ♣ K 10 5

	♠ K 8 4 ♡ 10 6 5 4 ◇ A 9 7 ♣ A J 7

The trey of hearts is led against three notrump by South. What play should Dummy make? The answer will be in this column tomorrow.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST

Irene Gardiner obtains a job as air stewardess after Bart Ralston breaks their engagement. Intent on his medical career, Bart has decided to marry Peggy Reagan, spoiled daughter of a prominent surgeon.

Irene is grateful when she is asked to share the apartment of two other girls, Virginia and Eve. Virginia is also an air stewardness and is engaged to Bill Naughton, for whom Eve vainly angles. Irene advises Eve to forget it, knowing that Eve's favorite pastime is falling in love.

Irene strikes up an acquaintance with Peggy's brother, Steve, and for his sake tries to be nice to the girl. Bart tires of his bargain and comes back to Irene. She reasons with him as calmly as though she had never been in love with him. Peggy suspects Bart of still loving Irene, and counters with hints about a mysterious suitor who telephones and sends her flowers.

Irene's decision that she is through with love wins her the name of "hard-hearted Hannah." Barney O'Sullivan, one of the pilots, teasingly kisses her just to prove that it can be done, and Irene is ashamed to admit that his kisses thrill her. When the phone rings, she hopes it is Barney.

THE voice on the telephone was Peggy's. In one of her overly enthusiastic moods she gushed, "I was just thinking about you. Wondering what you were doing."

Since Peggy had never telephoned before for such a reason, Irene assumed that she was checking up. It was Saturday again and Bart's afternoon off. Peggy probably wanted to know if Bart was spending it with her.

"I had lunch with Stephen," Irene explained, feeling sorry for the younger girl. "We just got home."

"When do you start working again?"

"Tomorrow, Peggy! Why?"

Peggy gave an affected laugh. "Oh, no particular reason. I just wondered. Do you go to Los Angeles?"

"No. I'll be going to Seattle."

"I see! Well, I want you to have lunch with me again, but we can arrange that later."

Not a Quiet Evening.

Having learned what she wanted to know, she made no further pretense of continuing the conversation and Irene hung up, wondering what it was all about.

Was Bart flying to Los Angeles? Did Peggy suspect that they might be going on the same plane, or was her question concerning the schedule merely to find out when Irene would be out of town?

It was just as well that she wasn't going to see him any more. Nothing but heartache for everyone concerned if she continued the association. Irene's head felt lighter than it had for weeks as she went into the bedroom and changed into a house dress for a quiet evening at home.

It proved to be anything but a quiet evening. In the first place, Eve had come home early and decided to clean her bedroom. This was so unprecedented, not having occurred before since Irene had moved into the apartment, that it meant the upheaval of the entire place.

Eve Felt Sour.

Eve's belongings overflowed into the living room. Hats and dresses filled the little hall and were heaped upon chairs and table. One silver pump peeped coyly from beneath the davenport while Eve, with a towel about her hair, sorted and sifted the endless conglomeration of odds and ends which had collected in her closet.

Virginia had returned that noon from Seattle and had spent her afternoon preparing various dishes that Bill liked. An angel food cake was turned upside down to cool. A leg of lamb and potatoes were browning in the oven, while the pungent flavor of artichokes boiled in vinegar and oil filled the kitchen. Virginia, who delighted in cooking these things no less than Bill enjoyed eating them, was flushed and smeared with flour.

Want It Straightened.

"I'll have just time for a bath before he gets here," she told Irene. "Do you mind basting the meat a couple of times?"

Irene agreed to do so and Virginia proceeded to the living room where every available chair was loaded with Eve's things. Stockings, girdles and brassieres were stacked in the center of the floor, and seeing this, Virginia lost her temper for the first time since Irene had met her.

"I asked you to put these things away two hours ago," she said. "I've cleaned the living room once today and I'll be darned if I'm going to do it again."

"What's the rush?" she demanded.

"I want it straightened up before Bill comes. I've worked all afternoon to make things attractive for him."

Argument Followed.

"You would," Eve commented, gathering an armload of lingerie from the floor. "It's girls like you that lose their boy friends. No wonder he steps out on you."

Virginia's blue eyes flashed.

"What do you know about it?"

"Plenty! Where was he that Saturday night you were in San Diego?"

Peace descended like a dove upon the other girl's face.

"Don't you wish you knew?" she retorted.

Eve sniffed.

"I suppose you think you do?"

"I do," Virginia answered confidently. "He was with me in San Diego. We went down on the same plane that noon just after you had asked him to spend the evening with you."

She went into her own room and closed the door, leaving the astonished Eve to turn upon Irene.

"You told her," she accused.

Virginia Was Blind.

"I did not. You told her yourself about calling him that night."

"But I didn't tell her I asked him to come over."

Irene shrugged.

"It must have been Bill then. After all, Eve, what can you expect? I told you not to interfere."

"I don't believe it," Eve asserted. "Bill wouldn't do that. He likes me too much. If Virginia weren't as blind as a bat, she'd see it."

Irene, who no longer believed in the loyalty of any man, wondered if this could possibly be the truth. It with an effort. Eve lifted her tear-drenched eyes.

"Oh, Bill, darling, why did you tell her about my asking you over that evening?"

Bill Was Amused.

Bill winked at Irene.

"Did I? I don't remember."

"Somebody did."

"Eve thinks I did it," Irene explained, "but I didn't."

The publicity man looked amused.

But Eve was too absorbed in proving her point to stop now.

"You didn't tell her, did you?" she insisted. "Yes or no? I want the truth."

A strange expression came into Bill's face.

"Yes, I did," he answered.

"You did? But why? When you know how much I care for you."

"That's just it," the man said simply. "That's why I want to be frank with you. I'm very fond of both of you girls, and not only because you're Virginia's friends."

They stared at him in bewilderment. They had never seen Bill so sober, but an instant later when Virginia appeared in the doorway, Irene understood.
